DEVOTED TO MAKING ADA A LARGER AND MORE PROGRESSIVE CITY

VOLUME 3

ADA, INDIAN TERRITORY, SATURDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 8, 1906

NUMBER 145

PAULS VALLEY ALSO AFTER K. C. L. & P. RY.

A. E. Hill Submits the Town a Proposition.

Pauls Valley Sentinel: Another railroad is coming into Pauls Valley. It will be here within two years, or better still, it can be said it will be here as quickly as it can be built. Not a jerk-water, branch line, but a full fledged trunkline, connecting with one of the greatest railroad projects ever launched in America.

The Kansas City, Lawton and Pacific Railway is assured for Pauls Valley, the energy and liberality of our citizens making it doubly sure.

E. A. Hill, vice president and general manager for K. C. L. and P. arrived in the city the first of the week.

He came with a definite, business-like proposition. If the citizens of Pauls Valley would lend sufficient encouragement the road would come. In brief such was the proposal Mr. Hill made to the Commercial Club. His company asks for right-of-way through the city, ten thousand dollars' worth of real estate and ten thousand dollars in cash if the road be in operation before Sept. 1, 1908.

The bonus contracts between the company and the various towns in Oklahoma and Indian Territory have been all executed with the exception of Lawton and Wagoner, since Pauls Valley is assuredly in line.

Pauls Valley will be on the main line which, starting from Kansas City and Joplin, will run through Wagoner, Muskogee, Beggs, McKennon, Deep Fork, Hampton, where the division shops will be located, and where it crosses the Ft. Smith & Western, Wewoka, Choctaw, Sasakwa, Ada, Pauls Valley and thence to Lawton.

Survey parties are now in the field working north from El Paso, Texas.

It is Mr. Hill's intention to form an early reorganization of the construction department, and sub-contracts will be let through the system for grading and timber work to be rushed to early completion.

Notice to the Public.

On August 8th, I insured with the National Live Stock Insurance company, of Dallas, Texas, through Hardin & Jones, agents at Ada, I. T., one pair of dapple gray horses, carrying $300 on each horse. Twenty days from the date of policy, one of the horses died, and five days later check in payment of same was received. I appreciate the promptness and courtesy of the National Live Stock Insurance company, and cheerfully recommend them to anyone desiring to insure their live stock. Very respectfully,

FURMAN IS HITTING THE REPUBLICANS HARD

Guthrie, Okla., Sept. 8.—Judge Furman of Ada, and Hon. Lee Cruce, of Ardmore, who addressed the Democrats of this city the other night, at the Guthrie convention hall, gave some hard licks to the district boards of the two territories, who recently finished their work of dividing the new state into constitutional convention districts.

Judge Furman in particular landed hard on the boards, designated the results of their work as outlandish gerrymander, which the people of the territory should rebuke. He also censured the republican party for being the friend of the railroads, and said if the republicans control the convention, that Henry Asp will write the new state's constitution.

Mr. Cruce also made a strong speech, his main point being a refutation of H. H. Howard's recent article on the school question.

In proving his charge that the districting boards had made a gerrymander, Mr. Furman said that in one Chickasaw nation district, where there are many negroes, the population is much less than 20,000, whereas in the Pauls Valley district, where there is a big democratic majority, the population is in excess of 20,000, or practically the same as making a negro in the Chickasaw country worth as much politically as two white men.

Chas. H. Filson, member of the Oklahoma districting board, was present and heard the bombardment against the board's actions.

The railroads in charge of the Republican administration will endeavor to continue their oppressions in the New State. Allowed to do so, the farmer will continue payment of the railroad taxes.

COAL BELT CONFERENCE.

Coal Towns Will Take Action to Advance Their Interests.

South McAlester, I. T., Sept. 8.—The coal belt towns will send representatives to an informal conference to be held in this city to discuss the disposition of the segregated coal and asphalt lands which will be held on the 17th of this month. At the meeting resolutions will be drafted and the plans for a great convention to meet in McAlester in November will be taken up.

The larger convention will ratify the resolutions adopted on the 17th of September and will present a memorial to the senatorial committee which will then be in session. The committee will in turn include the recommendations of the convention in its report to congress.

AN EX-CONFEDERATE MAY BE GOVERNOR OF KANSAS

Topeka, Kans. Sept. 7.—A Virginia ex-confederate for Governor of Kansas—the same Kansas that played such a prominent part in the events leading up to the war of the rebellion; the same Kansas that was once an abolition stronghold!

This anomaly will most likely be a result when the votes are counted next November, for the present indications are such as to make it almost certain that Col. William A. Harris, a native of London Co., Va., and a former soldier in the army of the lost cause, will be elected governor. Col. Harris is the democratic nominee. His republican opponent is E. W. Hoch, who is running for re-election. The prohibitionists and the middle of the road populists each have tickets in the field, but they are regarded as inconsequential this year, so the race is really between Hoch and Harris.

Normally, Kansas is overwhelmingly republican. It is only in landslide years that the republican state ticket is defeated, but it now appears certain that this is one of the landslide years. Governor Hoch is charged with being contaminated by railroad influence. It is said by all of the democrats, all of the populists and many of the republicans that he is a creature of the railroads, and that he does not fairly represent the people in his capacity as chief executive.

"Party regularity" is being preached most vigorously by campaign orators sent out by the republican state central committee, but even with a much less demonstrative campaign, the Democrats are apparently gaining strength for their ticket every day. Even thus early, much money is being posted on gubernatorial results, and the odds are largely in favor of Harris.

The republicans have been driven to the extremity of "waving the bloody shirt." They are giving all the publicity possible to the fact that Col. Harris gave four years of his life to fighting for the southern Confederacy. "Rebel" is the way the republican stump speakers designate Col. Harris.

But the vast majority of Kansans realize the civil war is a thing of the past, and the "waving of the bloody shirt" has thus far made no serious inroads upon the Harris following.

EVANGELIST TRIMBLE BEGINS CHRISTIAN REVIVAL

Evangelist C. F. Trimble arrived over the Frisco Friday night and began at once the revival at the Christian church. His initial sermon was a strong one on "Christ's Purposes in Our Conversion." The subject Saturday night will be "Kinship to Christ." Bro. Trimble is a pleasing speaker and one of power. A notable characteristic is his respect and toleration for the views of others. There is no vitriol in his make-up. Out in Oklahoma, where he is known best, he is characterized as the "Apostle of Love."

In that territory he has labored with signal success during the past year for the Oklahoma Christian Missionary society. The society had eight workers who did missionary work in the hardest fields, with the result of 700 additions to the church. Of these 400 were added under the preaching of Evangelist Trimble. During the year he preached 336 sermons and organized a number of new churches.

SOUTHERN COTTON ASS'N DEMANDS ONLY 10 CENTS

Hot Springs, Ark., Sept. 8.—The executive committee of the Southern Cotton association yesterday recommended to its members and the cotton growers of the South that no cotton be sold during the present season at less than 10c a pound.

In a resolution adopted by the committee it is stated that the crop is in a state of deterioration, and for that reason no estimate of the crop was made. The resolution states, however, that the committee is satisfied that the crop will not be as large as the current estimate.

The placing of the minimum price at 10c was in the nature of a victory for the conservative element of the association. In the executive session of the committee, which continued throughout the day, the highest price named as a minimum was 12c.

First Bale Brings $81.84.

W. T. Price, who Friday afternoon brought in from McGee the first bale received at Ada, finally sold the cotton to M. L. Walsh. Mr. Walsh paid 9 1-4 although the market was only 8 1-2. The bale weighed 528 pounds. The town made up a neat premium of $30, and all three papers donated a year's subscription. Altogether $81.84 was realized on the cotton. Mr. Price says the crop is spotted in his section; that the pests' depredations have been so extensive a good patch of cotton is the exception.

BOTH PARTIES AGAINST STATEHOOD IN ARIZONA

Nominate Candidates for Delegate and Resolute.

Bisbee, Ariz., Sept. 8.—As a result of the convention held here by both the Democratic and Republican parties of Arizona, Mark Smith, of Tucson, was named as the Democratic candidate for congress, and W. C. Cooper, of Globe, was named as the Republican candidate. This is the eighth time Mark Smith has been nominated by Democrats in Arizona, being first named in 1886.

Both parties adopted an identical resolution against joint statehood, as follows:

"We are unalterably opposed to joint statehood between Arizona and New Mexico and would prefer to remain a territory forever than to have to join with New Mexico."

The platform of the Democratic convention thanked the Democrats in congress and the Republicans who joined with them in giving the territory the right to vote "yes" or "no" on the question of joint statehood, eulogizing Mark Smith, delegate in congress, for his great work in preserving the autonomy of Arizona and declared in favor of equal taxation of all property in the territory.

The Republican platform endorsed the national administration and the territorial administration of Gov. Kibbey and in addition to the resolution against joint statehood declared for the equitable taxation of all the property of the territory.

MORNING PAPER FOR ADA.

Orris L. Williams, a prominent Republican and newspaper man in the Indian Territory, is in Ada preparatory to establishing a morning Republican paper. Mr. Williams is a gentleman of pleasant address and impresses the News that he would be a valuable acquisition to his party in this district, and, as well, to the town, for there is no denying that a morning paper for Ada would be a great boost for the town. Mr. Williams hopes to establish from the first an up-to-date telegraph service and linotype machine. There will be a meeting of the Republican and business interests at the courthouse tonight for the purpose of conferring with Mr. Williams in regard to the new enterprise. The business community, irrespective of politics, should become interested and turn out in force tonight. The value of a morning paper for Ada can hardly be over estimated. The Democratic City would not, of course, be affected by the new paper's political creed, but all would encourage its efforts to advance the town's commercial opportunities. The new railroad and the big cement plant are guaranteed. Why not secure a morning paper? That is, if it will stand and push for Ada and be decent and stand for a white man's country, and, on the whole, not give us too much of Republican sputtering.

J. J. Rotenberry a Candidate.

Capt. J. J. Rotenberry, a prominent farmer of McGee, was in town over night looking after his proposed candidacy for delegate to the constitutional convention. Though McGee is not in this recording district, that little Democratic city and community is included in our delegate district. McGee's candidate is a gentleman of pleasant address and is an experienced politician, having several years ago served his old state of Mississippi in the legislature. Capt. Rotenberry is a gentleman of ingratiating address and prominent in Farmers' Union circles, and it is safe to predict that he will not be last in the race for this position of great trust.

DISTRICT NO. 87 GETTING READY.

Now that the formal call has been issued for the meeting of the Democratic delegate district committee let it be seen to that every one of our seventeen townships are represented. It is an admirable arrangement, that of having each township committeeman to bring four other neighbor Democrats. Thus composed the body will be thoroughly representative, and in a multitude of council there is wisdom. There is considerable campaign work for this committee and but a few weeks in which to accomplish it. At the meeting next Saturday let every member, with his four neighbor advisors, be on hand resolute for action. A vigorous state party organization has the Republicans on the defensive. Our organization in District 87 must do its part to insure Democratic success in this section.

A MUSKOGEE attorney has been arrested on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses, the accusation being that he charged a client $150 for procuring him a marriage license. There has been many a love sick swain who has spent more than $150 in the enterprise, and yet never got as far as the license stage. It's worth big money to marry off some folks, anyhow.

In these days of rush and hurry courtesy is often forgotten. In the mad, pell mell rush of our life little things are done to offend that we had rather remained undone. RAPID FLIGHT OF TIME.

Mule That Aged Five Years Between the Months of February and June.

Mr. Justice Brewer, of the United States supreme court, in lecturing to his law class at the George Washington university, says the American Spectator, told the following story:

"I knew of a case once where two darkies swapped mules. One of them was an old hand at the business, and in making the trade he represented his mule to be seven years old, and told of the many good traits the animal had not. This was in February. About two months later the other darky began to realize that he had been victimized in the bargain and that the beast was fully 12 years old. So he decided to go back and tell the swindler he had lied to him about the animal. However, owing to it being the busy season of farming, he was not able to go until about the middle of June. He finally did go, and told his man what he thought of his rascally misrepresentations about the mule.

"You say," said the other fellow, "dat when you got de mule in February he was seven years old, and now it's June and he's 12 years old?"

"Yes, I do!" was the angry response.

"Well, sah, time sure do fly."

JAMAICANS LACK GINGER.

Seek Employment at Panama, But Are Said to Be Wasteful and Stupid.

Jamaicans are apparently jacks of all trades. Hungry for the big wages of Panama, school teachers, barbers, shoemakers, store clerks have flocked to the isthmus to find employment as masons, carpenters, blacksmiths and painters indifferently, says Everybody's Magazine. They are wasteful; they are stupid; they are possessed with an unutterable hatred of exertion other than conversation, preferably on religious or ethical topics. Here are some more statistics from my friend the foreman of painters: Hospital 54 is a building about 40 feet square; the amount of white lead required for the paint to be applied to it would be here in the states, about 75 pounds; it was necessary to use 250 pounds of white lead on the job; none of it was wasted; none was carried away; that white lead and all the other wasted materials which were mixed with it are chargeable to the Jamaica negro's inefficiency. Yet the canal must be built with Jamaican labor in the main. Some workmen are being brought from Galicia, in Spain; some have been imported from Martinique; a few, very few, have come down from the United States.

City-Bred Children.

A London scientist says that life in a metropolis makes young children sharp but not clever; that it often destroys their chance of ever being clever, for it hastens the development of the brain unnaturally; it makes them superficial, alert, but not observant; excitable, but without one spark of enthusiasm; they are apt to grow blasé, fickle, discontented; they see more things than the country-bred child, but not such interesting things; and they do not properly see anything, for they have neither the time nor capacity to get at the root of all the bewildering objects that crowd themselves into their little lives.

REMARKABLE RECOVERY.

One Day the Widow Was Inconsolable, the Next as Gay as a Lark.

P. F. Rothermel, counsel for the Lake Superior corporation, as the reorganized Consolidated Lake Superior is called, was complimented the other day on the excellent year that the concern has had, says the Pittsburg Gazette.

Mr. Rothermel smiled and answered:

"Yes, the company has gotten quickly on its feet. It has recovered quickly. It was not badly hurt, after all. And thus it resembles a widow of whom I heard recently.

"This lady's husband died, and a day or two after the funeral, a neighbor called to extend her condolences. "She expected to find the widow frantic with grief. She found her at the piano, singing a gay song. And, astonished at so quick a recovery, the visitor said:

"Well, well, I expected to see you in the deepest distress."

"Ah," said the widow, pathetically, "you should have seen me yesterday."

RARE ORCHID AGAIN FOUND

Plant Long-Sought Has Been Rediscovered on Recent Thibet Expedition.

An orchid which for 50 years has baffled all the attempts of collectors to find its native haunts has been rediscovered. This orchid is the cyrtidium Fairleanum, which is one of a random collection made in Assam in 1857, sent to London in the same year and bought by a Mr. Fairlie, of Liverpool, in whose possession it bloomed and was daily hailed and described in orchid literature as one of the most beautiful orchids hitherto known. Several other plants of the same orchid came with it, and the species was at once named Fairleanum, after Mr. Fairlie.

From the day of its first discovery, in spite of scores of expeditions and perilous journeys by collectors, not a single plant was found until some member of the Thibet expedition, a few months ago, discovered a whole bunch of the plants. He sent them along to Calcutta, whence two were dispatched to Kew, and others are gradually coming through to England.

"Probably another 50 years will elapse ere more Fairleanum are found," said a British specialist. "For no private collecting expedition is likely to venture into such a country. My own belief is that unless another military expedition traverses the same ground, there will never again be a chance of getting plants."

The plant flowering at Kew has five growths and two flowers. The second plant is developing five blooms. The flower has a slender, hairy scape about ten inches in height, a prominent and charming dorsal sepal, one and three-quarters inches in length by one and one-quarter inches in breadth, with a white ground beautifully veined with violet purple and with brownish green veins near the center and whitish hairs around the margins. The petals droop and have an upward curve at the tips, they are one and one-half inches in length, with a white ground streaked with purple and yellow. The upper margin of the petals is much undulated and covered with prominent purple hairs. The pouch is rather small, greenish-brown in color, veined with brownish red and covered with hairs.

How Insects Use Flowers.

It is astounding to think of the result of this mutual, and yet independent working. Every shade of color, from pale yellow to the richest blue, every peculiarity of form, from the flat shape of the buttercup to the intricate windings of the columbine; every degree of sweetness, from the insipidity of many flowers to the rich sugariness of the honeysuckle, and every kind of scent, from the foul odor which attracts vulgar flies to the most delicate perfumes that delight the bees, all have proceeded from this connection of insects with flowers.—Outing Magazine.

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the controller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

The Grass-Grown Hog

SUPERIOR TO CORN-FED HOGS
AS BREEDERS

BY G. HOCKETT

The hog, as our forefathers found him, was a wild animal with free range, rambling at will, rooting for herbs and eating what he could find that in his wild nature seemed good, exercising from morn till night. Grain of any kind was unknown to him. But since his captivity man has forced him to change his habits, to change his diet, and has changed him from the wild, angular rail-splitter to the docile, beautiful animal of today. This change has been effected in two ways: First, by care in selection of breeding stock, and second, by care in feeding. It has been said: "Show pigs, like poets, are born, not made." But in my estimation there is fully as much in the care and feeding. It is true we must have the individuality to build on. But it is equally true that that individual must have proper feed and care to develop it. The term develop is very often misused and I think in many instances misunderstood. The word develop is often used synonymously for fatten. This is a mistaken idea. A hog may be fat, yet not developed. In order to develop a pig he must have suitable food to give him growth of bone and muscle and regular exercise to give him strength and vigor.

We, in the corn belt, usually make corn a part of the pig's ration, which is all right if judiciously used. But in too many instances corn is made the exclusive diet, which is very injurious to the pig. This may be done in two ways: First, by keeping the hogs confined in pens, where there is no opportunity for them to obtain grass or other green feed and not supplying it, but feeding wholly a corn ration; second, by allowing range of pasture, but feeding too large quantities of corn. The hog will gorge itself on corn; its appetite being satisfied, it has no inclination to exercise, hunting over the pasture for more feed, but will lay down in the shade. In a short time it becomes sluggish; it becomes more and more corpulent; bone and muscle become weak and exercise becomes more painful to it; it can hardly walk from the shed to its feed; it may be gaining in weight; it may look nice, but it is not developing; it is fattening. The hog does not differ greatly in its anatomy from the other domestic animals. For an illustration take a colt at weaning time, put it in a small pen and feed an exclusive corn diet for a year. If it withstood the treatment, how many would select that colt for a breeding animal?

In order to develop a pig it must have a balanced ration and plenty of exercise. For convenience and economy it is best to furnish a pasture sufficiently large to furnish plenty of green feed and afford an opportunity to ramble at will, gathering food fresh from the bosom of mother nature. In connection with this it should have sufficient grain to keep it growing. Then a hog should be allowed to rustle some to develop stamina and trait of character and learn to make the best of its opportunities. By this I do not mean to starve. There are two extremes—stuff and starve. One is almost as injurious as the other. There are very few pigs highly fitted to be shown in the under six months class that ever made a hog fit to be shown again, and very few there are that ever begot or bore pigs that were able to win in any class. There are reasons for this. They have not been developed, but weakened and in most instances the highly-fitted pig under six months of age is, at a yearling, a physical wreck.

Of course, there is an incentive for us to produce big weights at young ages. And there is always a demand for the fat pig at good figures, which is a great temptation. But the sooner we wake up to the fact that the grass-grown hog is the breeder that will bring the show pigs that will win the sooner we will be on our road to success.

The farmer's boy does not look so attractive following the plow with his overalls on, but let him become physically developed, having grasped such opportunities as usually come to the average boy, then send him to college to finish his education and put on the veneering. We will find him able to appear to advantage in any society, able to successfully grapple with the great problems of the age and to successfully fill a place of trust in any branch of commerce.

So it is with the grass-grown hog. It does not appear so attractive in the pasture with its every day clothes on, but let it grow up, become fully developed and then it is ready to be fitted. When fitted it is ready to appear in the best society; ready to be a credit alike to both breeder and owner.

Backward Andy's Coortin'

BY SEUMAS MAC MANUS.

Liza Jane she lived in the very next townland to myself. An' as Liza Jane was given out for a hundred pounds of dry money, there was, as ye may well suspect, a tremendous traffic of boys come after her.

But it's little encouragement they got from Liza Jane; she considered coortin' a ridiculous waste of time that a pair of tomfools, only, might engage in; an' as for marryin' the most of the lads that presented themselves, she said she wouldn't make dishcloths of them, to wipe a pot.

This, I say, she thought of most of the neighbor boys, but not of all. There was one, Andy McClarnin, or Bab's Andy, as he was better known, by reason, as his father's name was Bab. Anyway, this Bab's Andy was no eyesore to Liza Jane, for he had a fine farm that fed five milch-cows, an' give him ten head of stock to sell off every harvest; his father, poor man, was five years dead.

An' Liza Jane Bohunnan saw that, all things considered, she couldn't get, an' wouldn't ask for, a better or a warmer sittin'-down than Bab's Andy's. An' accordingly she made up her mind that she'd marry Bab's Andy—in case the boy was anyways muddin' willin'.

At the tail-end o' four years' coortship Liza Jane begun to be not too pleased with proceedin's. An' fair good reason, too, the poor girl had.

"Mother," says she of a night when both herself an' her mother was sittin' over the kitchen fire, "I have let him fool 'round me for long enough. I mean," goes on she, "to have him, once an' for all, make up his mind on this matter whether he wants to make a wife of me or not—I mean that he'll make it up, or I'll make it up for him purty quick."

"Brave woman ye are, Liza Jane," says the mother, says she.

"An' on next Sunday night, too, he'll make his decision."

"The jewel ye are, Liza Jane!"

An' when, on the next Sunday night, poor Andy, poor sowl, come ploddin' to Liza Jane's, it's little he suspected the thraps that was laid down for him to walk into.

"Are ye all alone?" says he.

"My mother an' them," says she, "went one road an' another, to see the neighbors, an' left me to myself."

"Which," says Bab's Andy, says he, "was noways kindly of them to'st ye."

"Which," says Liza Jane, says she, calm, an' lookin' steady into the fire, "was very, very good of them."

"Good of them!" says Andy, says he.

"Was very, very good of them," says she, "considerin' that they knew I needed a quate hour to myself to discuss in me mind a very serious matter—in fact, I may say, an' extraor-dinary serious matter."

Bab's Andy he was all taken aback, an' the face on him got lengthy at once, an' he says, "Oh! I beg yer pardon, Liza Jane."

An' extraordinary serious matter, as I was sayin', she went on, as cool an' calm, "an' one that wants a good deal of deliberation; an' one, moreover, that I'm mortal glad to have ye here, to talk it over with ye."

"Oh!" says Bab's Andy, says he, settlin' himself to hear it, an' lookin' pleased that he was to be consulted.

"For," says she, "it's such a matter that there's only one man in the worl' I could talk it over with—an' that's you."

"I'm proud," says Andy. "I'm proud to know it, Liza Jane."

"For better, for worse," says she, playin' a trump-card, "for richer, for poorer, for good or for ill."

Poor Andy, it seemed like a dhraim to him that he'd heard something like them words somewhere or other afore, but it puzzled him for a minute to mind what it was about. So he gave it up, an' remarked, "Just so, Liza Jane. Indeed, so?"

An' then says she, "For richer, I sayed, for poorer, for good or for ill, from this time henceforrard." Then she waited a wee bit, to give him another chance—though if she'd waited durin' the nine lives of a cat it would never get into Andy's skull. "Andy McClarnin," she says, "don't ye see what I'm dhruvin' at?"

Poor Andy looked confused an' ashamed of himself, an' says he: "Faith, an' I don't, then, Liza, know from Adam down what ye're dhruvin' at, at all."

"I don't doubt it," says Liza Jane, severely. "Well, will ye understand me when I say that I'm thinkin' I had best marry an' settle down."

Troth, that was plain enough for a palin'-post to understand. So it's very little wonder that Bab's Andy did.

"Marry," says she, "an' settle down," perfectly cool an' calm, an' never seemin' to see Andy's raptures at all.

"An'," says she, "I was waitin', very anxious, to have your opinion on it."

"An' my opinion," is that though ye've done many wise things in your life, ye never done anything wiser; an'—an'—for—for—myself—"

"Thanky, Andy," says she, snappin' him up afore she'd let him go any further. "An' it was about time I'd think of settlin', if I'm ever goin' to settle—"

"Yes," says Andy.

"An' seein' that I have a hundred pounds at me back—"

"Yes," says Andy.

"A hundred pounds," says she, "not to mention the sprinkled cow, which comes to me likewise—"

"Yes, yes."

"An' a store of linen," says Liza Jane, says she.

"Magnificent!" says Andy.

"Peelin' I have all that—"

"Exactly," says Andy.

"An' seein', moreover," says she, slower, "seein', moreover," says she, "that I've been axed—"

"Ah-h-h!" says Bab's Andy, says he, with a purty puzzlin' look comin' over his countenance.

"Axed by a boy," says Liza Jane, an' closed her mouth again.

"Ye-ye-yes," says Andy, says he, tryin' to recollect when, in the name of wondher, he had axed her, an' comin' to the conclusion that he must 'a' been walkin' in his sleep some time or other.

"Seein'," says Liza Jane, says she, "that I've been axed by one, last Saturday night was a week."

Andy was ten times more puzzled than afore.

"Axed," says she "on Saturday night last was a week, by a boy with a big farm, from the Dhrimholme parish," an' she begun pillin' more turf on the fire.

"I thought—thought," says Andy, says he, shrugglin', "thought—it wasn't a boy from the Dhrimholme parish ye intended to marry."

"Oh-h-h!" says Liza Jane, says she. I see. You thought it was a boy in our own parish I was goin' to take?" says she, encouragin'ly.

Andy was himself again, an' he says, "Yes, Liza Jane; yes."

Says Liza Jane, says she, "Did ye think it was Mose McClure?"

"No," says Bab's Andy.

"Nor Sam Long?" says she.

"Nor Sam Long," says Bab's Andy.

"Then in wondher's name," says Liza Jane, says she, turnin' to him, an'

"NO," SAYS BAB'S ANDY.

lookin' him square, "in wondher's name," says she, "who do ye mean that I was goin' to marry?"

"An' I thought," says he, "Liza Jane, it was myself ye were goin' to marry."

Liza Jane she got a face on her that would freeze a lough, an' she dhrew herself up, an' says she, "I beg yer pardon, Mister McClarnin"—she wouldn't consent to know Andy McClarnin just then—"I beg yer pardon, Mister McClarnin," says she—an' poor Andy when he seen the sight of her, an' heard the words of her, went as weak as a dish-clout—"but I hope in my heart, an' sincerely trust, that ye didn't mean to insinuate—even in the inside of yourself—that I meant to offer to marry you—"

Mister McClarnin, or any other man that steps in shoe-leather this day—to offer myself to marry you without your first axin' me, Mister McClarnin?"

"Och, och, I ask an' beg," says Andy, says he, an' him in such a state of distress as might melt the heart of a millstone. "I ask an' beg," says he, "an' implore of ye a hundred thousand pardons for my ignorance in puttin' the thing as I did. But sure ye know, an' know, that if I didn't ax ye in words it wasn't for want of the wish, but the will, for four years gone. Ye know, an' know, that it was only fear kep' me from sayin' the words to ye—I mean to say ye should know."

Andy axed to ax ye, I come to ax ye three times, an' the fright overtuk me, an' I run home like a hare. I'm a dunce, Liza Jane. An' there I am now," says he, givin' up for want of breath, "an' do what ye like with me."

But as Bab's Andy had gone on, Liza Jane's look was changin' an' changin' an, when he finished, her look was as mild an' gentle as a lamb's.

An' then she hung her head a wee bit, an' sthrove her level best to blush, an' says she, "Oh, Andy, Andy! An' ye never oreatened a word of this to me afore! An' I never suspected it! No, no, it's me is the dunce—it's me is the dunce, Andy!"

Poor Andy's heart, when he saw the change in her, come up again from the bottom of his boots, an' was thumpin' against the crown of his skull, wantin' room to rise. "An'," says he, "Liza Jane Bohunnan, then ye don't take it ill—me thinkin' of ye?"

"Andy McClarnin," says she, "ye know this is suddint—very suddint. An' myself is flustered, an'—an' nervous a bit, an'—"

But if ye insist on an answer on the spur of the moment," says she, "I don't believe I do take it ill, at all, at all."

"An' Liza Jane Bohunnan," says Andy, says he, gettin' the nerve as Liza Jane lost it, "Liza Jane Bohunnan," says he, "will ye consent from this time forrard to wet yer wee grain of tay in my tay-pot?"

"A dacent, industrious boy, an' come of dacent, industrious people, an'—an' myself doesn't know but—maybe I could do worse."

The Over-Ambitious Girl

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.) Is there such a thing as useless knowledge, knowledge which is in itself rubbish, only fit to be stowed away in the lumber room of the mind?

I suppose teachers will take exception to the statement, but I am more and more inclined to think that a great deal that they laboriously teach, and schoolgirls laboriously learn, might as well be dropped wholly out of the curriculum. We are all aware that what remains to us a few years after we have finished our school education is, so far as facts are concerned, excessively small. What the schools have done, if they have wrought well, has been to give us mental facility and disciplined powers. The question is pertinent whether for girls they do this in the best way.

What ought you, a schoolgirl, to acquire in order to be prepared for your work in life?

It depends, of course, somewhat on your future. If you are to earn your bread by the toil of hands or brain, you must be taught application, concentration, perseverance and punctuality. Without these good working qualities, no girl will succeed in any trade, from dressmaking to novel-writing. Woman's great weakness lies in the direction of inattention, in consequence and irresponsibility, and these defects hamper her in the world of business and fatally retard her progress.

The schools should cultivate in girls these forceful and indispensable qualities, as part of the equipment for fighting the world-battle. If arithmetic, algebra and geometry, or Latin and French, or physics and economics are best calculated to promote this sort of mental and moral growth, by all means let our young girls study them. But one young girl should not have to spend all her time and all her strength during the golden years of school and college work in mastering them all. For the practical purposes of life the schools attempt too much and crowd it into too short a time, in the education of girls.

Schoolgirls are naturally aspiring and ambitious. They respond swiftly to the spur of an enthusiastic teacher's desires. They are always ready to undertake anything that is suggested and to work until the point of exhaustion. I am not speaking of the idle or the inert or the apathetic type of girlhood, but of girlhood in the mass, when I assert that it does not hold back from the pace that kills.

Boys cannot easily be pressed beyond a certain mark. Girls see the mark and try to go beyond it. And in so doing they often accumulate a lot of useless and worthless knowledge which never does them or anyone else a particle of good, and which might better be let alone, especially as it gathers dust and rust in forgotten pigeon-holes.

If a girl is to spend her maturity as a home-maker, as a home daughter, or later as a wife, or a mother, she requires not so much an enormous amount of erudition as whatever tends to promote common sense, self-restraint and genuine kindness, and to eliminate egoism. Women at home must be altruistic. Then, too, a girl who would shine in the home and hold her own in society must have culture and charm. If the schools help to form her character on strong and simple lines and to give her courage as well as sweetness, they do more for her than if they enable her to pass puzzling examinations on multifarious difficult subjects.

One thousand nine hundred and six or the words, "At home on rainy days," may be used in the lower left-hand corner, and the date of birth left entirely out.

The latter is most used for baby girl's cards; it is not always permissible to have so definite a reminder of her birth-date, after years have passed.

These cards are attached by tiny ribbon bows at the top and center of the larger card, which should always be engraved with the names of both father and mother. The address is added, written out in full. For a boy pink ribbon and blue for the girl is chosen.

The new chamois finished Hile thread gloves are such a good imitation that they look like the real skin. They are quite reasonable in price.

Proper Style For Baby's Card

The Size of the Card Announcing Baby's Arrival and the Inscription Thereon.

For the announcement of his birth, the boy has cards about two and one-fourth inches in length by one and one-eighth inches in width. His full name is engraved directly in the center, either early English, plain English, or French script, being selected, in accordance with that used on the cards of the parents, with which it is inclosed.

Down in the left-hand corner is written out in full: Master William Thomas Carlyle, July the fifteenth.

Danger From His Own Bayonet

The report of disaffection in the Russian army is plausible and very ominous. In the last analysis the stability of the ruling dynasty depends upon the loyalty of the troops and there has been no display of leadership that could make one welcome armed revolution. In the very nature of the case things are uneasy in the army. The rank and file is recruited from the fields and city tenements—from the classes most stirred by the political unrest; it is officered by the gentry—a class already on the defensive and increasingly unpopular. Unless Nicholas II. takes a prompt and masterful control of the situation he may find that the bayonets on which his throne now rests are turned against him. The omen of the saluting gun accidentally loaded with grapeshot is worth remembering.

Hay Caps for the Covering of Small Shocks

HAY CAPS ON SHOCKS TO PROTECT HAY FROM RAIN.

(The use of hay caps is coming to be more and more common. Farmers in humid areas, where rains are to be expected during harvest time, find that it pays to be able to protect cocks of hay until stacked. The Wisconsin experiment station has used them on small grain shocks, as shown in the accompanying illustration. For years they have been largely used in parts of the east. They are good for more than one season.)

Plan of Crane for Hay Stacker

Here is the description of a crane for stacking hay in use in Canada. The pole is 30 feet long, the arm seven feet. In the bottom of the pole a gudgeon is fitted. This sits on a stout plank 14 to 16 inches wide and three feet long. In the center of the plank is made a small hole for the gudgeon pin with four large holes, one at each corner, for stakes. The top of the pole is fitted with a collar made of a square piece of plank with a large hole in the center to go onto top of pole, a round tenon and shoulder having been made on the pole. This allows the pole to turn. At each corner of this plank a guy line is attached.

When stacking from wagon the pole stands between wagon and part of stack being built. A double harpoon fork with ropes, pulleys, guy lines, all complete, should cost less than $25, and it will be found an easy and speedy way of handling hay either from the wagon or from the ground when stacking it in the field and gathering it with sweeps.

DEVOTED TO MAKING ADA A LARGER AND MORE PROGRESSIVE CITY

VOLUME 8

ADA, INDIAN TERRITORY, SATURDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 8, 1906

NUMBER 145

PAULS VALLEY ALSO AFTER K. C. L. & P. RY.

A. E. Hill Submits the Town's Proposition.

Pauls Valley Sentinel: Another railroad is coming into Pauls Valley. It will be here within two years, or better still, it can be said it will be here as quickly as it can be built. Not a jerk-water, branch line, but a full fledged trunkline, connecting with one of the greatest railroad projects ever launched in America.

The Kansas City, Lawton and Pacific Railway is assured for Pauls Valley, the energy and liberality of our citizens making it doubly sure.

E. A. Hill, vice president and general manager for K. C. L. and P. arrived in the city the first of the week.

He came with a definite, business-like proposition. If the citizens of Pauls Valley would lend sufficient encouragement the road would come. In brief such was the proposal Mr. Hill made to the Commercial club. His company asks for right-of-way through the city, ten thousand dollars' worth of real estate and ten thousand dollars in cash if the road be in operation before Sept. 1, 1908.

The bonus contracts between the company and the various towns in Oklahoma and Indian Territory have been all executed with the exception of Lawton and Wagoner, since Pauls Valley is assuredly in line.

Pauls Valley will be on the main line which, starting from Kansas City and Joplin, will run through Wagoner, Muskogee, Beggs, McKennon, Deep Fork, Hampton, where the division shops will be located, and where it crosses the Ft. Smith & Western, Wewoka, Choctaw, Sasakwa, Ada, Pauls Valley and thence to Lawton.

Survey parties are now in the field working north from El Paso, Texas.

It is Mr. Hill's intention to form an early reorganization of the construction department, and sub-contracts will be let through the system for grading and timber work to be rushed to early completion.

Notice to the Public.

On August 8th, I insured with the National Live Stock Insurance company, of Dallas, Texas, through Hardin & Jones, agents at Ada, I. T., one pair of dapple gray horses, carrying $300 on each horse. Twenty days from the date of policy, one of the horses died, and five days later check in payment of same was received. I appreciate the promptness and courtesy of the National Live Stock Insurance company, and cheerfully recommend them to anyone desiring to insure their live stock. Very respectfully,

FURMAN IS HITTING THE REPUBLICANS HARD

Guthrie, Okla., Sept. 8.—Judge Furman of Ada, and Hon. Lee Cruise, of Ardmore, who addressed the Democrats of this city the other night, at the Guthrie convention hall, gave some hard licks to the district boards of the two territories, who recently finished their work of dividing the new state into constitutional convention districts.

Judge Furman in particular landed hard on the boards, designated the results of their work as outlandish gerrymandering, which the people of the territory should rebuke. He also censured the republican party for being the friend of the railroads, and said if the republicans control the convention, that Henry Asp will write the new state's constitution.

Mr. Cruise also made a strong speech, his main point being a refutation of H. H. Howard's recent article on the school question.

In proving his charge that the districting boards had made a gerrymander, Mr. Furman said that in one Chickasaw nation district, where there are many negroes, the population is much less than 20,000, whereas in the Pauls Valley district, where there is a big democratic majority, the population is in excess of 20,000, or practically the same as making a negro in the Chickasaw country worth as much politically as two white men.

Chas. H. Wilson, member of the Oklahoma districting board, was present and heard the bombardment against the board's actions.

The railroads in charge of the Republican administration will endeavor to continue their oppressions in the New State. Allowed to do so, the farmer will continue payment of the railroad taxes.

COAL BELT CONFERENCE.

Coal Towns Will Take Action to Advance Their Interests.

South McAlester, I. T., Sept. 8.—The coal belt towns will send representatives to an informal conference to be held in this city to discuss the disposition of the segregated coal and asphalt lands which will be held on the 17th of this month. At the meeting resolutions will be drafted and the plans for a great convention to meet in McAlester in November will be taken up.

The larger convention will ratify the resolutions adopted on the 17th of September and will present a memorial to the senatorial committee which will then be in session. The committee will in turn include the recommendations of the convention in its report to congress.

AN EX-CONFEDERATE MAY BE GOVERNOR OF KANSAS

Topeka, Kans. Sept. 7.—A Virginia ex-confederate for Governor of Kansas—the same Kansas that played such a prominent part in the events leading up to the war of the rebellion; the same Kansas that was once an abolition stronghold!

This anomaly will most likely be a result when the votes are counted next November, for the present indications are such as to make it almost certain that Col. William A. Harris, a native of London Co., Va., and a former soldier in the army of the lost cause, will be elected governor. Col. Harris is the democratic nominee. His republican opponent is E. W. Hoch, who is running for re-election. The prohibitionists and the middle of the road populists each have tickets in the field, but they are regarded as inconsequential this year, so the race is really between Hoch and Harris.

Normally, Kansas is overwhelmingly republican. It is only in landslide years that the republican state ticket is defeated, but it now appears certain that this is one of the landslide years. Governor Hoch is charged with being contaminated by railroad influence. It is said by all of the democrats, all of the populists and many of the republicans that he is a creature of the railroads, and that he does not fairly represent the people in his capacity as chief executive.

"Party regularity" is being preached most vigorously by campaign orators sent out by the republican state central committee, but even with a much less demonstrative campaign, the Democrats are apparently gaining strength for their ticket every day.

Even thus early, much money is being posted on gubernatorial results, and the odds are largely in favor of Harris.

The republicans have been driven to the extremity of "waving the bloody shirt." They are giving all the publicity possible to the fact that Col. Harris gave four years of his life to fighting for the southern Confederacy. "Rebel" is the way the republican stump speakers designate Col. Harris.

But the vast majority of Kansans realize the civil war is a thing of the past, and the "waving of the bloody shirt" has thus far made no serious inroads upon the Harris following.

SOUTHERN COTTON ASS'CN DEMANDS ONLY 10 CENTS

Hot Springs, Ark., Sept. 8.—The executive committee of the Southern Cotton association yesterday recommended to its members and the cotton growers of the South that no cotton be sold during the present season at less than 10c a pound.

In a resolution adopted by the committee it is stated that the crop is in a state of deterioration, and for that reason no estimate of the crop was made. The resolution states, however, that the committee is satisfied that the crop will not be as large as the current estimate.

The placing of the minimum price at 10c was in the nature of a victory for the conservative element of the association. In the executive session of the committee, which continued throughout the day, the highest price named as a minimum was 12c.

First Sale Being $21.84

W. T. Price, who Friday afternoon brought in from McGee the first bale received at Ada, finally sold the cotton to M. L. Walsh. Mr. Walsh paid 9 1/4 although the market was only 8 1/2. The bale weighed 528 pounds. The town made up a neat premium of $30, and all three papers donated a year's subscription. Altogether $21.84 was realized on the cotton. Mr. Price says the crop is spotted in his section; that the pests' depredations have been so extensive a good patch of cotton is the exception.

BOTH PARTIES AGAINST STATEHOOD IN ARIZONA

Nominate Candidates for Delegate and Regulate.

Bisbee, Ariz., Sept. 8.—As a result of the convention held here by both the Democratic and Republican parties of Arizona, Mark Smith, of Tucson, was named as the Democratic candidate for congress, and W. C. Cooper, of Globe, was named as the Republican candidate. This is the eighth time Mark Smith has been nominated by Democrats in Arizona, being first named in 1886.

Both parties adopted an identical resolution against joint statehood, as follows:

"We are unalterably opposed to joint statehood between Arizona and New Mexico and would prefer to remain a territory forever than to have to join with New Mexico."

The platform of the Democratic convention thanked the Democrats in congress and the Republicans who joined with them in giving the territory the right to vote "yes" or "no" on the question of joint statehood, eulogizing Mark Smith, delegate in congress, for his great work in preserving the autonomy of Arizona and declared in favor of equal taxation of all property in the territory.

The Republican platform endorsed the national administration and the territorial administration of Gov. Kibbey and in addition to the resolution against joint statehood declared for the equitable taxation of all the property of the territory.

EVANGELIST TRIMBLE BEGINS CHRISTIAN REVIVAL

Evangelist C. F. Trimble arrived over the Frisco Friday night and began at once the revival at the Christian church. His initial sermon was a strong one on "Christ's Purposes in Our Conversion." The subject Saturday night will be "Kinship to Christ." Bro. Trimble is a pleasing speaker and one of power. A notable characteristic is his respect and toleration for the views of others. There is no vitriol in his make-up. Out in Oklahoma, where he is known best, he is characterized as the "Apostle of Love."

In that territory he has labored with signal success during the past year for the Oklahoma Christian Missionary society. The society had eight workers who did missionary work in the hardest fields, with the result of 700 additions to the church. Of these 400 were added under the preaching of Evangelist Trimble. During the year he preached 398 sermons and organized a number of new churches.

MORNING PAPER FOR ADA.

Oris L. Williams, a prominent Republican and newspaper man in the Indian Territory, is in Ada preparatory to establishing a morning Republican paper. Mr. Williams is a gentleman of pleasant address and impresses the news that he would be a valuable acquisition to his party in this district, and, as well, to the town, for there is no denying that a morning paper for Ada would be a great boost for the town. Mr. Williams hopes to establish from the first an up-to-date telegraph service and linotype machine. There will be a meeting of the Republican and business interests at the courthouse tonight for the purpose of conferring with Mr. Williams in regard to the new enterprise. The business community, irrespective of politics, should be interested and turn out in force tonight. The value of a morning paper for Ada can hardly be over estimated. The Democratic City would not, of course, be affected by the new paper's political creed, but all would encourage its efforts to advance the town's commercial opportunities. The new railroads and the big cement plant are guaranteed. Why not secure a morning paper? That is, if it will stand and push for Ada and be decent and stand for a white man's country, and, on the whole, not give us too much of Republican splutterings.

J. J. Rotenberry a Candidate.

Capt. J. J. Rotenberry, a prominent farmer of McGee, was in town over night looking after his proposed candidacy for delegate to the constitutional convention. Though McGee is not in this recording district, that little Democratic city and community is included in our delegate district. McGee's candidate is a gentleman of pleasant address and is an experienced politician, having several years ago served his old state of Mississippi in the legislature. Capt. Rotenberry is a gentleman of ingratiating address and prominent in Farmers' Union circles, and it is safe to predict that he will not be last in the race for this position of great trust.

DISTRICT NO. 87 GETTING READY.

Now that the formal call has been issued for the meeting of the Democratic delegates district committee let it be seen to that every one of our seventeen townships are represented. It is an admirable arrangement, that of having each township committeeman to bring four other neighbor Democrats. Thus composed the body will be thoroughly representative, and in a multitude of council there is wisdom. There is considerable campaign work for this committee and but a few weeks in which to accomplish it. At the meeting next Saturday let every member, with his four neighbor advisors, be on hand resolute for action. A vigorous state party organization has the Republicans on the defensive. Our organization in District 87 must do its part to insure Democratic success in this section.

A MUSKOGEE attorney has been arrested on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses, the accusation being that he charged a client $150 for procuring him a marriage license. RAPID FLIGHT OF TIME.

Mule That Aged Five Years Between the Months of February and June.

Mr. Justice Brewer, of the United States supreme court, in lecturing to his law class at the George Washington university, says the American Spectator, told the following story: "I knew of a case once where two darkies swapped mules. One of them was an old hand at the business, and in making the trade he represented his mule to be seven years old, and told of the many good traits the animal had not. This was in February. About two months later the other darky began to realize that he had been victimized in the bargain and that the beast was fully 12 years old. So he decided to go back and tell the swindler he had lied to him about the animal. However, owing to it being the busy season of farming, he was not able to go until about the middle of June. He finally did go, and told his man what he thought of his rascally misrepresentations about the mule. "You say," said the other fellow, "dat when you got de mule in February he was seven years old, and now it's June and he's 12 years old?" "Yes, I do!" was the angry response. "Well, sah, time sure do fly."

JAMAICANS LACK GINGER.

Seek Employment at Panama, But Are Said to Be Wasteful and Stupid.

Jamaicans are apparently jacks of all trades. Hungry for the big wages of Panama, school teachers, barbers, shoemakers, street clerks have flocked to the isthmus to find employment as masons, carpenters, blacksmiths and painters indifferently, says Everybody's Magazine. They are wasteful; they are stupid; they are possessed with an unutterable hatred of exertion other than conversation, preferably on religious or ethical topics. Here are some more statistics from my friend the foreman of painters. Hospital 54 is a building about 10 feet square, the amount of white lead required for the paint to be applied to it would be here in the states, about 75 pounds, it was necessary to use 250 pounds of white lead on the job, none of it was colored, none was carried away; that white lead and all the other wasted materials which were mixed with it are chargeable to the Jamaica negro's inefficiency. Yet the canal must be built with Jamaican labor in the main. Some workmen are being brought from Galicia, in Spain, some have been imported from Martinique; a few, very few, have come down from the United States.

City-Bred Children.

A London scientist says that life in a metropolis makes young children tharp but not clever; that it often destroys their chance of ever being clever, for it hastens the development of the brain unnaturally; it makes them superficial, alert, but not observant, excitable, but without one spark of enthusiasm; they are apt to grow blasé, fickle, discontented; they see more things than the country-bred child, but not such interesting things; and they do not properly see anything, for they have neither the time nor capacity to get at the root of all the bewildering objects that crowd themselves into their little lives.

REMARKABLE RECOVERY.

One Day the Widow Was Inconceivable, the Next as Gay as a Lark.

P. F. Rothermel, counsel for the Lake Superior corporation, as the reorganized Consolidated Lake Superior is called, was complimented the other day on the excellent year that the concern has had, says the Pittsburg Gazette.

Mr. Rothermel smiled and answered: "Yes, the company has gotten quickly on its feet. It has recovered quickly. It was not badly hurt, after all. And thus it resembles a widow of whom I heard recently. "This lady's husband died, and, a day or two after the funeral, a neighbor called to extend her condolences. "She expected to find the widow frantic with grief. She found her at the piano, singing a gay song. And, astonished at so quick a recovery, the visitor said: "Well, well, I expected to see you in the deepest distress. "Ah," said the widow, pathetically, "you should have seen me yesterday."

Plant Long-Sought Has Been Rediscovered on Recent Thibet Expedition.

An orchid which for 50 years has baffled all the attempts of collectors to find its native haunts has been rediscovered. This orchid is the cypripedium Fairleanum, which is one of a random collection made in Assam in 1857, sent to London in the same year and bought by a Mr. Fairlie, of Liver pool, in whose possession it bloomed, and was daily bailed and described in orchid literature as one of the most beautiful orchids hitherto known. Several other plants of the same orchid came with it, and the species was at once named Fairleanum, after Mr. Fairlie.

From the day of its first discovery, in spite of scores of expeditions and perilous journeys by collectors, not a single plant was found until some member of the Thibet expedition, a few months ago, discovered a whole bunch of the plants. He sent them along to Calcutta, whence two were dispatched to Kew, and others are gradually coming through to England. "Probably another 50 years will elapse ere more Fairleanum are found," said a British specialist "for no private collecting expedition is likely to venture into such a country. My own belief is that unless another military expedition traverses the same ground there will never again be a chance of getting plants."

The plant flowering at Kew has five growths and two flowers. The second plant is developing five blooms. The flower has a slender, hairy scape about ten inches in height, a prominent and charming dorsal sepal, one and three-quarters inches in length by one and one-quarter inches in breadth, with a white ground beautifully veined with violet purple and with brownish green veins near the center and whitish hairs around the margins. The petals droop and have an upward curve at the tips, they are one and one-half inches in length with a white ground streaked with purple and yellow. The upper margin of the petals is much undulated and covered with prominent purple hairs. The pouch is rather small, greenish-brown in color veined with brownish red and covered with the hairs.

How Insects Use Flowers.

It is astounding to think of the result of this mutual, and yet independent working. Every shade of color from pale yellow to the richest red, every peculiarity of form, from the flat shape of the buttercup, the intricate windings of the lameline, every degree of sweetness, from the insipidity of many flowers to the rich suariness of the honeysuckle, and every kind of scent, from the foul odor which attracts vulgar flies to the most delicate perfumes that delight the bees, all have proceeded from this connection of insects with flowers.—Outing Magazine.

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

The Grass-Grown Hog

(SUPERIOR TO CORN-FED HOGS)
AS BREEDERS

BY G. HOCKETT

The hog, as our forefathers found him, was a wild animal with free range, rambling at will, rooting for herbs and eating what he could find that in his wild nature seemed good, exercising from morn till night. Grain of any kind was unknown to him. But since his captivity man has forced him to change his habits, to change his diet, and has changed him from the wild, angular rail-splitter to the docile, beautiful animal of today. This change has been effected in two ways: First, by care in selection of breeding stock, and, second, by care in feeding. It has been said: "Show pigs, like poets, are born, not made." But in my estimation there is fully as much in the care and feeding. It is true we must have the individuality to build on. But it is equally true that that individual must have proper feed and care to develop it. The term develop is very often misunderstood. The word develop is often used synonymously for fatten. This is a mistaken idea. A hog may be fat, yet not developed. In order to develop a pig he must have suitable food to give him growth of bone and muscle and regular exercise to give him strength and vigor.

We, in the corn belt, usually make corn a part of the pig's ration, which is all right if judiciously used. But in too many instances corn is made the exclusive diet, which is very injurious to the pig. This may be done in two ways. First, by keeping the hogs confined in pens, where there is no opportunity for them to obtain grass or other green feed and not supplying it, but feeding wholly a corn ration; second, by allowing range of pasture, but feeding too large quantities of corn. The hog will gorge itself on corn, its appetite being satisfied, it has no inclination to exercise, hunting over the pasture for more feed, but will lay down in the shade. In a short time it becomes sluggish; it becomes more and more corpulent; bone and muscle become weak and exercise becomes more painful to it; it can hardly walk from the shed to its feed; it may be gaining in weight, it may look nice, but it is not developing. It is fattening. The hog does not differ greatly in its anatomy from the other domestic animals. For an illustration take a colt at weaning time, put it in a small pen and feed an exclusive corn diet for a year. If it withstood the treatment, how many would select that colt for a breeding animal?

In order to develop a pig it must have a balanced ration and plenty of exercise. For convenience and economy it is best to furnish a pasture sufficiently large to furnish plenty of green feed and afford an opportunity to ramble at will, gathering food fresh from the bosom of mother nature. In connection with this it should have sufficient grain to keep it growing. Then a hog should be allowed to rustle some to develop stamina and trait of character and learn to make the best of its opportunities. By this I do not mean to starve. There are two extremes—stuff and starve. One is almost as injurious as the other. There are very few pigs highly fitted to be shown in the under six months class that ever made a hog fit to be shown again, and very few there are that ever begot or bore pigs that were able to win in any class. There are reasons for this. They have not been developed, but weakened and in most instances the highly-fitted pig under six months of age is, at a yearling, a physical wreck. Of course, there is an incentive for us to produce big weights at young ages. And there is always a demand for the fat pig at good figures, which is a great temptation. But the sooner we wake up to the fact that the grass-grown hog is the breeder that will bring the show pigs that will win the sooner we will be on our road to success.

The farmer's boy does not look so attractive following the plow with his overalls on, but let him become physically developed, having grasped such opportunities as usually come to the average boy, then send him to college to finish his education and put on the veneering. We will find him able to appear to advantage in any society, able to successfully grapple with the great problems of the age and to successfully fill a place of trust in any branch of commerce.

So it is with the grass-grown hog. It does not appear so attractive in the pasture with its every day clothes on, but let it grow up become fully developed and then it is ready to appear in the best society; ready to be a credit alike to both breeder and owner.

Hay Caps for the Covering of Small Shocks

HAY CAPS ON SHOCKS TO PROTECT HAY FROM RAIN

(The use of hay caps is coming to be more and more common. Farmers in humid areas, where rains are to be expected during harvest time find that it pays to be able to protect shocks of hay until stacked. The Wisconsin experiment station has used them on small grain shocks, as shown in the accompanying illustration. For years they have been largely used in parts of the east. They are good for more than one season.)

Plan of Crane for Hay Stacker

Here is the description of a crane for stacking hay in use in Canada. The pole is 30 feet long, the arm seven feet. In the bottom of the pole a gudgeon is fitted. This sits on a stout plank 14 to 16 inches wide and three feet long. In the center of the plank is made a small hole for the gudgeon with four large holes, one at each corner, for stakes. The top of the pole is fitted with a collar made of a square piece of plank with a large hole in the center to go onto top of pole, a round tenon and shoulder having been made on the pole. This allows the pole to turn. At each corner of this plank a guy line is attached. When stacking from wagon the pole stands between wagon and part of stack being built. A double harpoon fork with ropes, pulleys, guy lines, all complete, should cost less than $25, and it will be found an easy and speedy way of handling hay either from the wagon or from the ground when stacking it in the field and gathering it with sweeps.

KEEP ORCHARD CLEAN.—To let apples rot on the ground is to confess that you are not fit to care for an orchard.

THE HORSE'S NECK.—Washing the horses' necks and shoulders in salt water will keep them from getting sore.

Backward Andy's Coortin'

BY SHUMAS MAC MANUS.

Liza Jane she lived in the very next townland to myself. An' as Liza Jane was given out for a hundred pounds of dry money, there was, as ye may well suspect, a tremendous traffic of boys come after her.

But it's little encouragement they got from Liza Jane; she considered coortin' a ridiculous waste of time that a pair of tomfools, only, might engage in; an' as for marryin' the most of the lads that presented themselves, she said she wouldn't make dishcloths of them, to wipe a pot.

This, I say, she thought of most of the neighbor boys, but not of all. There was one, Andy McClarnin, or Bab's Andy, as he was better known, by reason, as his father's name was Bab. Anyway, this Bab's Andy was no eyesore to Liza Jane, for he had a fine farm that fed five milch-cows, an' give him ten head of stock to sell off every harvest; his father, poor man, was five years dead.

An' Liza Jane Bohunnan saw that, all things considered, she couldn't get, an' wouldn't ask for, a better or a warmer sittin'-down than Bab's Andy's. An' accordingly she made up her mind that she'd marry Bab's Andy—in case the boy was anyways middlin' willin'.

At the tail-end o' four years' courtship Liza Jane began to be not too pleased with proceedin's. An' fair good reason, too, the poor girl had.

"Mother," says she of a night when both herself an' her mother was sittin' over the kitchen fire, "I have let him fool 'round me for long enough. I mean," goes on she, "to have him, once an' for all, make up his mind on this matter whether he wants to make a wife of me or not—I mean that he'll make it up, or I'll make it up for him purty quick."

"Brave woman ye are, Liza Jane," says the mother, says she.

"An' on next Sunday night, too, he'll make his decision."

"The jewel ye are, Liza Jane!"

An' when, on the next Sunday night, poor Andy, poor sowl, come ploddin' to Liza Jane's, it's little he suspected the thraps that was laid down for him to walk into.

"Are ye all alone?" says he.

"My mother an' them," says she, "went one road an' another, to see the neighbors, an' left me to myself."

"Which," says Bab's Andy, says he, "was noways kindly of them to rest ye."

"Which," says Liza Jane, says she, "calm, an' lookin' steady into the fire, 'was very, very good of them.'"

"Good of them!" says Andy, says he.

"Was very, very good of them," says she, "considerin' that they knew I needed a quiet hour to myself to discuss in me mind a very serious matter—in fact, I may say, an extraordinary serious matter."

Bab's Andy he was all taken aback, an' the face on him got lengthy at once, an' he says, "Oh! I beg yer pardon, Liza Jane."

"An' extraordinary serious matter, as I was sayin'," she went on, as cool an' calm, "an' one that wants a good deal of deliberation; an' one, moreover, that I'm mortal glad to have ye here, to talk it over with ye."

"Oh!" says Bab's Andy, says he, settlin' himself to hear it, an' lookin' pleased that he was to be consulted.

"For," says she, "it's such a matter that there's only one man in the worl' I could talk it over with—an' that's you."

"I'm proud," says Andy. "I'm proud to know it, Liza Jane."

"For better, for worse," says she, playin' a thump-card, "for richer, for poorer, for good or for ill."

Poor Andy, it seemed like a dhrain to him that he'd heard something like them words somewhere or other afore, but it puzzled him for a minute to mind what it was about. So he gave it up, an' remarked, "Just so, Liza Jane. Indeed, so?"

An' then says she, "For richer, I sayed, for poorer, for good or for ill, from this time hencefor'd." Then she waited a wee bit, to give him an' other chance—though if she'd waited durin' the nine lives of a cat it would never get into Andy's skull. "Andy McClarnin," she says, "don't ye see what I'm dhrivin' at?"

Poor Andy looked confused an' ashamed of himself, an' says he, "Faith, an' I don't, then, Liza, know from Adam down what ye're dhrivin' at, at all."

"I don't doubt it," says Liza Jane, severely. "Well, will ye understand me when I say that I'm thinkin' I had best marry an' settle down."

Troth, that was plain enough for a palin'-post to understand. So it's very little wonder that Bab's Andy did.

"Marry," says she, "an' settle down," perfectly cool an' calm, an' uvoos seemin' to see Andy's raptures at all. "An'," says she, "I was waitin', very anxious, to have your opinion on it."

"An' my opinion," says he, with his head hangin', "is that though ye've done many wise things in your life, ye never done anything wiser; an'—an'—for—for—myself—"

"Thanky, Andy," says she, snappin' him up afore she'd let him go any further. "An' it was about time I'd think of settlin', if I'm ever goin' to settle—"

"Yes," says Andy.

"An' seein' that I have a hundred pounds at me back—"

"Yes," says Andy.

"A hundred pounds," says she, "not to mention the sprinkled cow, which comes to me likewise—"

"Yes, yes."

"An' a store of linen," says Liza Jane, says she.

"Magnificent!" says Andy.

"Seein' I have all that—"

"Exactly," says Andy.

"An' seein', moreover," says she, slower, "seein', moreover," says she, "that I've been axed—"

"Ah-h-h!" says Bab's Andy, says he, with a purty puzzlin' look comin' over his countenance.

"Axed by a boy," says Liza Jane, an' closed her mouth again.

"Ye-ye-yes," says Andy, says he, tryin' to recollect when, in the name of wondher, he had axed her, an' comin' to the conclusion that he must 'a' been walkin' in his sleep some time or other.

"Seein'," says Liza Jane, says she, "that I've been axed by one, last Saturday night was a week."

Andy was ten times more puzzled than afore.

"Axed," says she "on Saturday night last was a week, by a boy with a big farm, from the Dhrimholme parish," an' she begun pillin' more turf on the fire.

"I thought—thought," says Andy, says he, sthruagin', "thought—it wasn't a boy from the Dhrimholme parish ye intended to marry."

"Oh-h-h!" says Liza Jane, says she. I see. You thought it was a boy in our own parish I was goin' to take?" says she, encouragin'ly.

Andy was himself again, an' he says, "Yes, Liza Jane; yes."

Says Liza Jane, says she, "Did ye think it was Mose McClure?"

"No," says Bab's Andy.

"Nor Sam Long?" says she.

"Nor Sam Long," says Bab's Andy.

"Then in wondher's name," says Liza Jane, says she, turnin' to him, an'

NO, SAYS BAB'S ANDY

lookin' him square, "In wondher's name," says she, "who do ye mean that I was goin' to marry?"

"An' I thought," says he, "Liza Jane, it was myself ye were goin' to marry."

Liza Jane she got a face on her that would freeze a lough, an' she shrew herself up, an' says she, "I beg yer pardon, Mither McClarnin"—she wouldn't consent to know Andy McClarnin just then—"I beg yer pardon, Mither McClarnin," says she—an' poor Andy when he seen the sight of her, an' heard the words of her, went as weak as a dish-clout—"but I hope in my heart, an' sincerely trust, that ye didn't mean to insinuate—even in the inside of yourself—that I meant to offer to marry you—you, Mither McClarnin, or any other man that steps in shoe leather this day—to offer myself to marry you without your first axin' me, Mither McClarnin?"

"Och, och, I ask an' beg," says Andy, says he, an' him in such a state of distress as might melt the heart of a millstone. "I ask an' beg," says he, "an' implore of ye a hundred thousand pardons for my ignorance in puttin' the thing as I did. But sure ye know, an' know, that if I didn't ax ye in words it wasn't for want of the wish, but the will, for four years gone. Ye know, an' know, that it was only fear kep' me from sayin' the words to ye—I mean to say ye should know. I wanted to ax ye, an' I come to ax ye three times, an' the fright overtook me, an' I run home like a hare. I'm a dunce, Liza Jane an' there I am now."

Says he, givin' up for want of breath, "an' do what ye like with me."

But as Bab's Andy had gone on, Liza Jane's look was changin' an' changin' an, when he finished, her look was as mild an' gentle as a lamb's.

An' then she hung her head a wee bit, an' athrow her level best to blush, an' says she, "Oh, Andy, Andy! An' ye never preatend a word of this to me afore! An' I never suspected it! No, no, it's me is the dunce—it's me is the dunce, Andy!"

Poor Andy's heart, when he saw the change in her, came up again from the bottom of his boots, an' was thumpin' against the crown of his skull, wantin' room to rise. "An'," says he, "Liza Jane Bohunnan, then ye don't take it ill—me thinkin' of ye?"

"Andy McClarnin," says she, "ye know this is suddint—very suddint. An' myself is flustered, an'—an' nervous a bit, an'— But if ye insist on an answer on the spur of the moment," says she, "I don't believe I do take it ill, at all, at all."

"An' Liza Jane Bohunnan," says Andy, says he, gettin' the nerve as Liza Jane lost it, "Liza Jane Bohunnan," says he, "will ye consent from this time forr'd to wet yer wee grain of tay in my tay-pot?"

"Andy McClarnin," says she, "ye're a daicent, industrious boy, an' come of daicent, industrious people, an'—an' myself doesn't know but—maybe I could do worse."

The Over-Ambitious Girl

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

(Copyright, 1904, by Joseph B. Bowles.) Is there such a thing as useless knowledge, knowledge which is in itself rubbish, only fit to be stowed away in the lumber room of the mind?

I suppose teachers will take exception to the statement, but I am more and more inclined to think that a great deal that they laboriously teach, and schoolgirls laboriously learn, might as well be dropped wholly out of the curriculum. We are all aware that what remains to us a few years after we have finished our school education is, so far as facts are concerned, excessively small. What the schools have done, if they have wrought well, has been to give us mental facility and disciplined powers. The question is pertinent whether for girls they do this in the best way.

What ought you, a schoolgirl, to acquire in order to be prepared for your work in life?

It depends, of course, somewhat on your future. If you are to earn your bread by the toll of hands or brain, you must be taught application, concentration, perseverance and punctuality. Without these good working qualities, no girl will succeed in any trade, from dressmaking to novel-writing. Woman's great weakness lies in the direction of inattention, inconsequence and irresponsibility, and these defects hamper her in the world of business and fatally retard her progress.

The schools should cultivate in girls these forceful and indispensable qualities, as part of the equipment for fighting the world-battle. If arithmetic, algebra and geometry, or Latin and French, or physics and economics are best calculated to promote this sort of mental and moral growth, by all means let our young girls study them. But one young girl should not have to spend all her time and all her strength during the golden years of school and college work in mastering them all. For the practical purposes of life the schools attempt too much and crowd it into too short a time, in the education of girls.

Schoolgirls are naturally aspiring and ambitious. They respond swiftly to the spur of an enthusiastic teacher's desires. They are always ready to undertake anything that is suggested and to work until the point of exhaustion. I am not speaking of the idle or the inert or the apathetic type of girlhood, but of girlhood in the mass, when I assert that it does not hold back from the pace that kills.

Boys cannot easily be pressed beyond a certain mark. Girls see the mark and try to go beyond it. And in so doing they often accumulate a lot of useless and worthless knowledge which never does them or anyone else a particle of good, and which might better be left alone, especially as it gathers dust and rust in forgotten pigeon-holes.

If a girl is to spend her maturity as a home-maker, as a home daughter, or later as a wife, or a mother, she requires not so much an enormous amount of erudition as whatever tends to promote common sense, self-restraint and genuine kindness, and to eliminate egotism. Women at home must be altruistic. Then, too, a girl who would shine in the home and hold her own in society must have culture and charm. If the schools help to form her character on strong and simple lines and to give her courage as well as sweetness, they do more for her than if they enable her to pass puzzling examinations on multiform difficult subjects.

Proper Style For Baby's Card

The Size of the Card Announcing Baby's Arrival and the Inscription Thereon.

For the announcement of his birth, the boy has cards about two and one-fourth inches in length by one and one-eighth inches in width. His full name is engraved directly in the center, either early English, plain English, or French script, being selected, in accordance with that used on the cards of the parents, with which it is inclosed.

Down in the left-hand corner is written out in full: Master William Thomas Carlyle, July the fifteenth.

Danger From His Own Bayonet

The report of disaffection in the Russian army is plausible and very ominous. In the last analysis the stability of the ruling dynasty depends upon the loyalty of the troops and there has been no display of leadership that could make one welcome armed revolution. In the very nature of the case things are uneasy in the army. The rank and file is recruited from the fields and city tenements—

Far be it from me to blame either girls or their preceptors for the great and foolish waste that is forever taking place in matters educational. Primarily parents are the people most in fault.

The other day an advertisement appeared in a widely read weekly periodical, which ran to the following effect. The words are not precisely quoted, but here is the gist of the advertiser's "Wanted:"

"To take entire charge of a little girl of ten, a young woman who is a college graduate. She must be fond of children, in robust health, and between the ages of 25 and 30. Must have had experience in similar positions and be able to furnish the highest references. She must be familiar with modern methods of teaching, and besides the usual branches, her work will include music, drawing and nature study."

The mother of the little maid of ten evidently expected that her child was to tackle music, drawing and nature study in addition to the "usual branches." These, at a rough guess, may have been history, geography, English grammar, spelling, reading, penmanship, and possibly French or German. I was surprised that so grasping a mother did not require the college graduate who should apply for the vacancy as her daughter's governess to be an accomplished cook and an adept in manual training, so that her child might receive initiation in these mysteries too.

The mother who advertised was laying out too wide a plan for her daughter, and was demanding an impossibility of some unfortunate young woman of 25. The average age of the college alumna is 22. To have gone over the work prescribed in an ordinary college course, likewise to have attained distinction enough in music and art to instruct in these exacting departments, and to have learned the alphabet of nature study would be feats of herculean achievement that would send a girl to a sanitarium or her grave. To look for robust health after all that effort would be absurd, and as for the experience in actual teaching, where would be the time for it? The advertisement is a straw that shows where the wind blows to.

Girls, what you need and must have, at any cost, is a good working knowledge of reading, writing and arithmetic; some love for and acquaintance with good literature, and this springs from good reading; the accuracy and clearness which come of writing a good hand, and the honesty which is the product of fair mindedness and well balanced arithmetic. Don't be persuaded to spend precious hours on studying sciences that do not allure you, and annexing to memory vocabularies which signify nothing to you. But for pity's sake learn to spell, learn to write a decent, straightforward letter, and learn to converse not only fluently, but correctly, in clear, well-chosen English.

Avoid useless learning. Life is too full to be handicapped by needless impedimenta. Time is too brief to be mortgaged to ambition. Health is too precious to be ruthlessly sacrificed.

One or two subjects thoroughly assimilated are worth far more to culture than a mere smattering of a dozen, and the effect of the first on character is much more enduring than of the second. I wish I could convince every schoolgirl that thoroughness in little is a higher virtue than diffuseness spread loosely over large things. Attempt less and gain more should be your rule.

One thousand nine hundred and six or the words, "At home on rainy days," may be used in the lower left-hand corner, and the date of birth left entirely out.

The latter is most used for baby girl's cards; it is not always permissible to have so definite a reminder of her birth-date, after years have passed.

These cards are attached by tiny ribbon bows at the top and center of the larger card, which should always be engraved with the names of both father and mother. The address is added, written out in full. For a boy pink ribbon and blue for the girl is chosen.

PAULS VALLEY ALSO AFTER K. G. L. & P. RY.

A. E. Hill Submits the Town a Proposition.

Pauls Valley Sentinel: Another railroad is coming into Pauls Valley. It will be here within two years, or better still, it can be said it will be here as quickly as it can be built. Not a jerk-water, branch line, but a full fledged trunkline, connecting with one of the greatest railroad projects ever launched in America.

The Kansas City, Lawton and Pacific Railway is assured for Pauls Valley, the energy and liberality of our citizens making it doubly sure.

E. A. Hill, vice president and general manager for K. C. L. and P. arrived in the city the first of the week.

He came with a definite, business-like proposition. If the citizens of Pauls Valley would lend sufficient encouragement the road would come. In brief such was the proposal Mr. Hill made to the Commercial club. His company asks for right-of-way through the city, ten thousand dollars' worth of real estate and ten thousand dollars in cash if the road be in operation before Sept. 1, 1908.

The bonus contracts between the company and the various towns in Oklahoma and Indian Territory have been all executed with the exception of Lawton and Wagoner, since Pauls Valley is assuredly in line.

Pauls Valley will be on the main line which, starting from Kansas City and Joplin, will run through Wagoner, Muskogee, Beggs, McKennon, Deep Fork, Hampton, where the division shops will be located, and where it crosses the Ft. Smith & Western, Wewoka, Choctaw, Sasakwa, Ada, Pauls Valley and thence to Lawton.

Survey parties are now in the field working north from El Paso, Texas.

It is Mr. Hill's intention to form an early reorganization of the construction department, and sub-contracts will be let through the system for grading and timber work to be rushed to early completion.

Notice to the Public.

On August 8th, I insured with the National Live Stock Insurance company, of Dallas, Texas, through Hardin & Jones, agents at Ada, I. T., one pair of dapple gray horses, carrying $300 on each horse. Twenty days from the date of policy, one of the horses died, and five days later check in payment of same was received. I appreciate the promptness and courtesy of the National Live Stock Insurance company, and cheerfully recommend them to anyone desiring to insure their live stock. Very respectfully,

FURMAN IS HITTING THE REPUBLICANS HARD

Guthrie, Okla., Sept. 8.—Judge Furman of Ada, and Hon. Lee Cruce, of Ardmore, who addressed the Democrats of this city the other night, at the Guthrie convention hall, gave some hard hits to the district boards of the two territories, who recently finished their work of dividing the new state into constitutional convention districts.

Judge Furman in particular landed hard on the boards, designated the results of their work as outlandish gerrymandering, which the people of the territory should rebuke. He also censured the republican party for being the friend of the railroads, and said if the republicans control the convention, that Henry Asp will write the new state's constitution.

Mr. Cruce also made a strong speech, his main point was a refutation of H. H. Howard's recent article on the school question.

In proving his charge that the districting boards had made a gerrymander, Mr. Furman said that in one Chickasaw nation district, where there are many negroes, the population is much less than 20,000, whereas in the Pauls Valley district, where there is a big democratic majority, the population is in excess of 20,000, or practically the same as making a negro in the Chickasaw country worth as much politically as two white men.

Chas. H. Filson, member of the Oklahoma districting board, was present and heard the bombardment against the board's actions.

The railroads in charge of the Republican administration will endeavor to continue their oppressions in the New State. Allowed to do so, the farmer will continue payment of the railroad taxes.

COAL BELT CONFERENCE.

Coal Towns Will Take Action to Advance Their Interests.

South McAlester, I. T., Sept. 8.—The coal belt towns will send representatives to an informal conference to be held in this city to discuss the disposition of the segregated coal and asphalt lands which will be held on the 17th of this month. At the meeting resolutions will be drafted and the plans for a great convention to meet in McAlester in November will be taken up.

The larger convention will ratify the resolutions adopted on the 17th of September and will present a memorial to the senatorial committee which will then be in session. The committee will in turn include the recommendations of the convention in its report to congress.

AN EX-CONFEDERATE MAY BE GOVERNOR OF KANSAS

Topeka, Kans. Sept. 7.—A Virginia ex-confederate for Governor of Kansas—the same Kansas that played such a prominent part in the events leading up to the war of the rebellion; the same Kansas that was once an abolition stronghold!

This anomaly will most likely be a result when the votes are counted next November, for the present indications are such as to make it almost certain that Col. William A. Harris, a native of London Co., Va., and a former soldier in the army of the lost cause, will be elected governor. Col. Harris is the democratic nominee. His republican opponent is E. W. Hoch, who is running for re-election. The prohibitionists and the middle of the road populists each have tickets in the field, but they are regarded as inconsequential this year, so the race is really between Hoch and Harris.

Normally, Kansas is overwhelmingly republican. It is only in landslide years that the republican state ticket is defeated, but it now appears certain that this is one of the landslide years. Governor Hoch is charged with being contaminated by railroad influence. It is said by all of the democrats, all of the populists and many of the republicans that he is a creature of the railroads, and that he does not fairly represent the people in his capacity as chief executive.

"Party regularity" is being preached most vigorously by campaign orators sent out by the republican state central committee, but even with a much less demonstrative campaign, the Democrats are apparently gaining strength for their ticket every day.

Even thus early, much money is being posted on gubernatorial results, and the odds are largely in favor of Harris.

The republicans have been driven to the extremity of "waving the bloody shirt." They are giving all the publicity possible to the fact that Col. Harris gave four years of his life to fighting for the southern Confederacy. "Rebel" is the way the republican stump speakers designate Col. Harris.

But the vast majority of Kansans realize the civil war is a thing of the past, and the "waving of the bloody shirt" has thus far made no serious inroads upon the Harris following.

EVANGELIST TRIMBLE BEGINS CHRISTIAN REVIVAL

Evangelist C. F. Trimble arrived over the Frisco Friday night and began at once the revival at the Christian church. His initial sermon was a strong one on "Christ's Purposes in Our Conversion." The subject Saturday night will be "Kinship to Christ." Bro. Trimble is a pleasing speaker and one of power. A notable characteristic is his respect and toleration for the views of others. There is no vitriol in his make-up. Out in Oklahoma, where he is known best, he is characterized as the "Apostle of Love."

In that territory he has labored with signal success during the past year for the Oklahoma Christian Missionary society. The society had eight workers who did missionary work in the hardest fields, with the result of 700 additions to the church. Of these 400 were added under the preaching of Evangelist Trimble. During the year he preached 388 sermons and organized a number of new churches.

SOUTHERN COTTON ASS'N DEMANDS ONLY 10 CENTS

Hot Springs, Ark., Sept. 8.—The executive committee of the Southern Cotton association yesterday recommended to its members and the cotton growers of the South that no cotton be sold during the present season at less than 10c a pound.

In a resolution adopted by the committee it is stated that the crop is in a state of deterioration, and for that reason no estimate of the crop was made. The resolution states, however, that the committee is satisfied that the crop will not be as large as the current estimate.

The placing of the minimum price at 10c is in the nature of a victory for the conservative element of the association. In the executive session of the committee, which continued throughout the day, the highest price named as a minimum was 12c.

First Sale Brings $21.84.

W. T. Price, who Friday afternoon brought in from McGee the first bale received at Ada, finally sold the cotton to M. L. Walsh. Mr. Walsh paid 9 1-4 although the market was only 8 1-2. The bale weighed 528 pounds. The town made up a neat premium of $30, and all three papers donated a year's subscription. Altogether $21.84 was realized on the cotton. Mr. Price says the crop is spotted in his section; that the pests' depredations have been so extensive a good patch of cotton is the exception.

BOTH PARTIES AGAINST STATEHOOD IN ARIZONA

Nominate Candidates for Delegate and Regulate.

Bisbee, Ariz., Sept. 8.—As a result of the convention held here by both the Democratic and Republican parties of Arizona, Mark Smith, of Tucson, was named as the Democratic candidate for congress, and W. C. Cooper, of Globe, was named as the Republican candidate. This is the eighth time Mark Smith has been nominated by Democrats in Arizona, being first named in 1886.

Both parties adopted an identical resolution against joint statehood, as follows:

"We are unalterably opposed to joint statehood between Arizona and New Mexico and would prefer to remain a territory forever than to have to join with New Mexico."

The platform of the Democratic convention thanked the Democrats in congress and the Republicans who joined with them in giving the territory the right to vote "yes" or "no" on the question of joint statehood, eulogizing Mark Smith, delegate in congress, for his great work in preserving the autonomy of Arizona and declared in favor of equal taxation of all property in the territory.

The Republican platform endorsed the national administration and the territorial administration of Gov. Kibbey and in addition to the resolution against joint statehood declared for the equitable taxation of all the property of the territory.

MORNING PAPER FOR ADA.

Oris L. Williams, a prominent Republican and newspaper man in the Indian Territory, is in Ada preparatory to establishing a morning Republican paper. Mr. Williams is a gentleman of pleasant address and impresses the News that he would be a valuable acquisition to his party in this district, and, as well, to the town, for there is no denying that a morning paper for Ada would be a great boost for the town. Mr. Williams hopes to establish from the first an up-to-date telegraph service and linotype machine. There will be a meeting of the Republican and business interests at the courthouse tonight for the purpose of conferring with Mr. Williams in regard to the new enterprise. The business community, irrespective of politics, should be come interested and turn out in force tonight. The value of a morning paper for Ada can hardly be over estimated. The Democratic City would not, of course, be affected by the new paper's political creed, but all would encourage its efforts to advance the town's commercial opportunities. The new railroads and the big cement plant are guaranteed. Why not secure a morning paper? That is, if it will stand and push for Ada and be decent and stand for a white man's country, and, on the whole, not give us too much of Republican splutterings.

J. J. Rotenberry a Candidate.

Capt. J. J. Rotenberry, a prominent farmer of McGee, was in town over night looking after his proposed candidacy for delegate to the constitutional convention. Though McGee is not in this recording district that little Democratic city and community is included in our delegate district. McGee's candidate is a gentleman of pleasant address and is an experienced politician, having several years ago served his old state of Mississippi in the legislature. Capt. Rotenberry is a gentleman of ungratifying address and prominent in Farmers' Union circles, and it is safe to predict that he will not be last in the race for this position of great trust.

DISTRICT NO. 87 GETTING READY.

Now that the formal call has been issued for the meeting of the Democratic delegate district committee let it be seen to that every one of our seventeen townships are represented. It is an admirable arrangement, that of having each township committeeman to bring four other neighbor Democrats. Thus composed the body will be thoroughly representative, and in a multitude of council there is wisdom. There is considerable campaign work for this committee and but a few weeks in which to accomplish it. At the meeting next Saturday let every member, with his four neighbor advisors, be on hand resolute for action. A vigorous state party organization has the Republicans on the defensive. Our organization in District 87 must do its part to insure Democratic success in this section.

A MUSKOGEE attorney has been arrested on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses, the accusation being that he charged a client $150 for procuring him a marriage license. RAPID FLIGHT OF TIME.

Mule That Aged Five Years Between the Months of February and June.

Mr. Justice Brewer, of the United States supreme court, in lecturing to his law class at the George Washington university, says the American Spectator, told the following story:

"I knew of a case once where two darkies swapped mules. One of them was an old hand at the business, and in making the trade he represented his mule to be seven years old, and told of the many good traits the animal had not. This was in February. About two months later the other darky began to realize that he had been victimized in the bargain and that the beast was fully 12 years old. So he decided to go back and tell the swindler he had lied to him about the animal. However, owing to it being the busy season of farming, he was not able to go until about the middle of June. He finally did go, and told his man what he thought of his rascally misrepresentations about the mule. 'You say,' said the other fellow 'dat when you got de mule in February he was seven years old, and now it's June and he's 12 years old?' 'Yes, I do!' was the angry response. 'Well, sah, time sure do fly.'"

JAMAICANS LACK GINGER.

Seek Employment at Panama, But Are Said to Be Wasteful and Stupid.

Jamaicans are apparently jacks of all trades. Hungry for the big wages of Panama, school teachers, barbers, shoemakers, street clerks have flocked to the isthmus to find employment as masons, carpenters, blacksmiths and painters indifferently, says Everybody's Magazine. They are wasteful, they are stupid, they are assessed with an unutterable hatred of exertion other than conversation, preferably on religious or ethical topics. Here are some more statistics from my friend the foreman of paintbox Hospital 54 as a building about 10 feet square, the amount of white lead required for the paint to be applied to it would be here in the states, about 75 pounds. It was necessary to use 250 pounds of white lead on the job. None of it was color, none was carried away; that white lead and all the other wasted materials which were mixed with it are chargeable to the Jamaica negro's inefficiency. Yet the canal must be built with Jamaican labor in the main. Some workmen are being brought from Galicia, in Spain, some have been imported from Martinique, a few, very few, have come down from the United States.

City-Bred Children.

A London scientist says that life in a metropolis makes young children sharp but not clever; that it often destroys their chance of ever being clever, for it hastens the development of the brain unnaturally; it makes them superficial, alert, but not observant, excitable, but without one spark of enthusiasm, they are apt to grow blasé, fickle, discontented; they see more things than the country-bred child, but not such interesting things; and they do not properly see anything, for they have neither the time nor capacity to get at the root of all the bewildering objects that crowd themselves into their little lives.

REMARKABLE RECOVERY.

One Day the Widow Was Inconsolable, the Next as Gay as a Lark.

P. F. Rothermel, counsel for the Lake Superior corporation, as the reorganized Consolidated Lake Superior is called, was complimented the other day on the excellent year that the concern has had, says the Pittsburg Gazette.

Mr. Rothermel smiled and answered: "Yes, the company has gotten quickly on its feet. It has recovered quickly. It was not badly hurt, after all. And thus it resembles a widow of whom I heard recently. 'This lady's husband died, and a day or two after the funeral, a neighbor called to extend her condolences. 'She expected to find the widow frantic with grief. She found her at the piano, singing a gay song. And, astonished at so quick a recovery, the visitor said: 'Well, well, I expected to see you in the deepest distress.' 'Ah,' said the widow, pathetically, 'you should have seen me yesterday.'"

RARE ORCHID AGAIN FOUND.

Plant Long-Sought Has Been Rediscovered on Recent Thibet Expedition.

An orchid which for 50 years has baffled all the attempts of collectors to find its native haunts has been rediscovered. This orchid is the cypripedium Fairleanum, which is one of a random collection made in Assam in 1857, sent to London in the same year and bought by a Mr. Fairlie, of Liverpool, in whose possession it bloomed and was daily hailed and described in orchid literature as one of the most beautiful orchids hitherto known. Several other plants of the same orchid came with it, and the species was at once named Fairleanum, after Mr. Fairlie.

From the day of its first discovery, in spite of scores of expeditions and perilous journeys by collectors not a single plant was found until some member of the Thibet expedition, a few months ago, discovered a whole bunch of the plants. He sent them along to Calcutta, whence two were dispatched to Kew and others are gradually coming through to England. "Probably another 50 years will elapse ere more Fairleanum are found," said a British specialist "for no private collecting expedition is likely to venture into such a country. My own belief is that unless another military expedition traverses the same ground there will never again be a chance of setting plants."

The plant flowering at Kew has five months and two flowers. The second plant is developing five blooms. The flower has a slender hairy scape about ten inches in height, a prominent and charming dorsal sepal, one and three-quarters inches in length by one and one-quarter inches in breadth, with a white ground beautifully veined with violet purple and with brownish green veins near the center and whitish hairs around the margins. The petals droop and have an upward curve at the tips, they are one and one-half inches in length with a white ground streaked with purple and yellow. The upper margin of the petals is much undulating and covered with prominent purple points. The pouch is rather small, greenish brown in color veined with brownish red and covered with the hairs.

How Insects Use Flowers.

It is astounding to think of the result of this mutual, and yet independent working. Every shade of color from pale yellow to the richest red, every peculiarity of form, from the flat shape of the buttercup to the intricate windings of the lily, every degree of sweetness, from the insipidity of many flowers to the rich sugaryness of the honeysuckle, and every kind of scent, from the foul odor which attracts vulgar flies to the most delicate perfumes that delight the bees, all have proceeded from this connection of insects with flowers—Outing Magazine.

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

The Grass-Grown Hog

SUPERIOR TO CORN-FED HOGS
AS BREEDERS

BY G. HOCKETT

The hog, as our forefathers found him, was a wild animal with free range, rambling at will, rooting for herbs and eating what he could find that in his wild nature seemed good, exercising from morn till night. Grain of any kind was unknown to him. But since his captivity man has forced him to change his habits, to change his diet, and has changed him from the wild, angular rail-splitter to the docile, beautiful animal of today. This change has been effected in two ways: First, by care in selection of breeding stock, and, second, by care in feeding. It has been said: "Show pigs, like poets, are born, not made." But in my estimation there is fully as much in the care and feeding. It is true we must have the individuality to build on. But it is equally true that that individual must have proper feed and care to develop it. The term develop is very often misunderstood. The word develop is often used synonymously for fatten. This is a mistaken idea. A hog may be fat, yet not developed. In order to develop a pig he must have suitable food to give him growth of bone and muscle and regular exercise to give him strength and vigor.

We, in the corn belt, usually make corn a part of the pig's ration, which is all right if judiciously used. But in too many instances corn is made the exclusive diet, which is very injurious to the pig. This may be done in two ways. First, by keeping the hogs confined in pens, where there is no opportunity for them to obtain grass or other green feed and not supplying it, but feeding wholly a corn ration; second, by allowing range of pasture, but feeding too large quantities of corn. The hog will gorge itself on corn, its appetite being satisfied, it has no inclination to exercise, hunting over the pasture for more feed, but will lay down in the shade. In a short time it becomes sluggish; it becomes more and more corpulent; bone and muscle become weak and exercise becomes more painful to it; it can hardly walk from the shed to its feed; it may be gaining in weight, it may look nice, but it is not developing. It is fattening. The hog does not differ greatly in its anatomy from the other domestic animals. For an illustration take a colt at weaning time, put it in a small pen and feed an exclusive corn diet for a year. If it withstood the treatment, how many would select that colt for a breeding animal?

In order to develop a pig it must have a balanced ration and plenty of exercise. For convenience and economy it is best to furnish a pasture sufficiently large to furnish plenty of green feed and afford an opportunity to ramble at will, gathering food fresh from the bosom of mother nature. In connection with this it should have sufficient grain to keep it growing. Then a hog should be allowed to rustle some to develop stamina and trait of character and learn to make the best of its opportunities. By this I do not mean to starve. There are two extremes—stuff and starve. One is almost as injurious as the other. There are very few pigs highly fitted to be shown in the under six months class that ever made a hog fit to be shown again, and very few there are that ever begot or bore pigs that were able to win in any class. There are reasons for this. They have not been developed, but weakened and in most instances the highly-fitted pig under six months of age is, at a yearling, a physical wreck. Of course, there is an incentive for us to produce big weights at young ages. And there is always a demand for the fat pig at good figures, which is a great temptation. But the sooner we wake up to the fact that the grass-grown hog is the breeder that will bring the show pigs that will win the sooner we will be on our road to success.

The farmer's boy does not look so attractive following the plow with his overalls on, but let him become physically developed, having grasped such opportunities as usually come to the average boy, then send him to college to finish his education and put on the veneering. We will find him able to appear to advantage in any society, able to successfully grapple with the great problems of the age and to successfully fill a place of trust in any branch of commerce.

So it is with the grass-grown hog. It does not appear so attractive in the pasture with its every day clothes on, but let it grow up become fully developed and then it is ready to appear in the best society; ready to be a credit alike to both breeder and owner.

Hay Caps for the Covering of Small Shocks

HAY CAPS ON SHOCKS TO PROTECT HAY FROM RAIN

(The use of hay caps is coming to be more and more common. Farmers in humid areas, where rains are to be expected during harvest time find that it pays to be able to protect shocks of hay until stacked. The Wisconsin experiment station has used them on small grain shocks, as shown in the accompanying illustration. For years they have been largely used in parts of the east. They are good for more than one season.)

Plan of Crane for Hay Stacker

Here is the description of a crane for stacking hay in use in Canada. The pole is 30 feet long, the arm seven feet. In the bottom of the pole a gudgeon is fitted. This sits on a stout plank 14 to 16 inches wide and three feet long. In the center of the plank is made a small hole for the gudgeon with four large holes, one at each corner, for stakes. The top of the pole is fitted with a collar made of a square piece of plank with a large hole in the center to go onto top of pole, a round tenon and shoulder having been made on the pole. This allows the pole to turn. At each corner of this plank a guy line is attached. When stacking from wagon the pole stands between wagon and part of stack being built. A double harpoon fork with ropes, pulleys, guy lines, all complete, should cost less than $25, and it will be found an easy and speedy way of handling hay either from the wagon or from the ground when stacking it in the field and gathering it with sweeps.

KEEP ORCHARD CLEAN.—To let apples rot on the ground is to confess that you are not fit to care for an orchard.

Backward Andy's Coortin'

BY SHUMAS MAC MANUS.

Liza Jane she lived in the very next townland to myself. An' as Liza Jane was given out for a hundred pounds of dry money, there was, as ye may well suspect, a tremendous traffic of boys come after her.

But it's little encouragement they got from Liza Jane; she considered coortin' a ridiculous waste of time that a pair of tomfools, only, might engage in; an' as for marryin' the most of the lads that presented themselves, she said she wouldn't make dishcloths of them, to wipe a pot.

This, I say, she thought of most of the neighbor boys, but not of all. There was one, Andy McClarnin, or Bab's Andy, as he was better known, by reason, as his father's name was Bab. Anyway, this Bab's Andy was no eyesore to Liza Jane, for he had a fine farm that fed five milch-cows, an' give him ten head of stock to sell off every harvest; his father, poor man, was five years dead.

An' Liza Jane Bohunnan saw that, all things considered, she couldn't get, an' wouldn't ask for, a better or a warmer sittin'-down than Bab's Andy's. An' accordingly she made up her mind that she'd marry Bab's Andy—in case the boy was anyways middlin' willin'.

At the tail-end o' four years' courtship Liza Jane began to be not too pleased with proceedin's. An' fair good reason, too, the poor girl had.

"Mother," says she of a night when both herself an' her mother was sittin' over the kitchen fire, "I have let him fool 'round me for long enough. I mean," goes on she, "to have him, once an' for all, make up his mind on this matter whether he wants to make a wife of me or not—I mean that he'll make it up, or I'll make it up for him purty quick."

"Brave woman ye are, Liza Jane," says the mother, says she.

"An' on next Sunday night, too, he'll make his decision."

"The jewel ye are, Liza Jane!"

An' when, on the next Sunday night, poor Andy, poor sowl, come ploddin' to Liza Jane's, it's little he suspected the thraps that was laid down for him to walk into.

"Are ye all alone?" says he.

"My mother an' them," says she, "went one road an' another, to see the neighbors, an' left me to myself."

"Which," says Bab's Andy, says he, "was noways kindly of them to 'st ye."

"Which," says Liza Jane, says she, "calm, an' lookin' steady into the fire, 'was very, very good of them."

"Good of them!" says Andy, says he.

"Was very, very good of them," says she, "considerin' that they knew I needed a quiet hour to myself to discuss in me mind a very serious matter—in fact, I may say, an extraordinary serious matter."

Bab's Andy he was all taken aback, an' the face on him got lengthy at once, an' he says, "Oh! I beg yer pardon, Liza Jane."

"An' extraordinary serious matter, as I was sayin'," she went on, as cool an' calm, "an' one that wants a good deal of deliberation; an' one, moreover, that I'm mortal glad to have ye here, to talk it over with ye."

"Oh!" says Bab's Andy, says he, settlin' himself to hear it, an' lookin' pleased that he was to be consulted.

"For," says she, "it's such a matter that there's only one man in the worl' I could talk it over with—an' that's you."

"I'm proud," says Andy. "I'm proud to know it, Liza Jane."

"For better, for worse," says she, playin' a thump-card, "for richer, for poorer, for good or for ill."

Poor Andy, it seemed like a dhralm to him that he'd heard something like them words somewhere or other afore, but it puzzled him for a minute to mind what it was about. So he gave it up, an' remarked, "Just so, Liza Jane. Indeed, so?"

An' then says she, "For richer, I sayed, for poorer, for good or for ill, from this time hencefor'd." Then she waited a wee bit, to give him an' other chance—though if she'd waited durin' the nine lives of a cat it would never get into Andy's skull. "Andy McClarnin," she says, "don't ye see what I'm dhrivin' at?"

Poor Andy looked confused an' ashamed of himself, an' says he, "Faith, an' I don't, then, Liza, know from Adam down what ye're dhrivin' at, at all."

"I don't doubt it," says Liza Jane, severely. "Well, will ye understand me when I say that I'm thinkin' I had best marry an' settle down."

Troth, that was plain enough for a palin'-post to understand. So it's very little wonder that Bab's Andy did.

"Marry," says she, "an' settle down," perfectly cool an' calm, an' 'uovers seemin' to see Andy's raptures at all.

"An'," says she, "I was waitin', very anxious, to have your opinion on it."

"An' my opinion," says he, with his head hangin', "is that though ye've done many wise things in your life, ye never done anything wiser; an'—an'—for—for—myself—"

"Thanky, Andy," says she, snappin' him up afore she'd let him go any further. "An' it was about time I'd think of settlin', if I'm ever goin' to settle."

"Yes," says Andy.

"An' seein' that I have a hundred pounds at me back—"

"Yes," says Andy.

"A hundred pounds," says she, "not to mention the sprinkled cow, which comes to me likewise—"

"Yes, yes," says Liza Jane, says she.

"Magnificent!" says Andy.

"Seein' I have all that—"

"Exactly," says Andy.

"An' seein', moreover," says she, "that I've been axed—"

"An' then she closed her mouth hard, an' waited.

"Ah-h-h!" says Bab's Andy, says he, with a purty puzzlin' look comin' over his countenance.

"Axed by a boy," says Liza Jane, an' closed her mouth again.

"Ye-ye-yes," says Andy, says he, tryin' to recollect when, in the name of wondher, he had axed her, an' comin' to the conclusion that he must 'a' been walkin' in his sleep some time or other.

"Seein'," says Liza Jane, says she, "that I've been axed by one, last Saturday night was a week."

Andy was ten times more puzzled than afore.

"Axed," says she "on Saturday night last was a week, by a boy with a big farm, from the Dhrimholme parish," an' she begun pillin' more turf on the fire.

"I thought—thought," says Andy, says he, sthru'glin', "thought—it wasn't a boy from the Dhrimholme parish ye intended to marry."

"Oh-h-h!" says Liza Jane, says she. I see. You thought it was a boy in our own parish I was goin' to take?" says she, encouragin'ly.

Andy was himself again, an' he says, "Yes, Liza Jane; yes."

Says Liza Jane, says she, "Did ye think it was Mose McClure?"

"No," says Bab's Andy.

"Nor Sam Long?" says she.

"Nor Sam Long," says Bab's Andy.

"Then in wondher's name," says Liza Jane, says she, turnin' to him, an'

NO, SAYS BAB'S ANDY

lookin' him square, "In wondher's name," says she, "who do ye mean that I was goin' to marry?"

"An' I thought," says he, "Liza Jane, it was myself ye were goin' to marry."

Liza Jane she got a face on her that would freeze a lough, an' she threw herself up, an' says she, "I beg yer pardon, Mither McClarnin!"—she wouldn't consent to know Andy McClarnin just then—"I beg yer pardon, Mither McClarnin," says she—an' poor Andy when he seen the sight of her, an' heard the words of her, went as weak as a dish-clout—"but I hope in my heart, an' sincerely trust, that ye didn't mean to insinuate—even in the inside of yourself—that I meant to offer to marry you—you, Mither McClarnin, or any other man that steps in shoe leather this day—to offer myself to marry you without your first axin' me, Mither McClarnin?"

"Och, och, I ask an' beg," says Andy, says he, an' him in such a state of distress as might melt the heart of a millstone. "I ask an' beg," says he, "an' implore of ye a hundred thousand pardons for my ignorance in puttin' the thing as I did. But sure ye know, an' know, that if I didn't ax ye in words it wasn't for want of the wish, but the will, for four years gone. Ye know, an' know, that it was only fear kep' me from sayin' the words to ye—I mean to say ye should know. I wanted to ax ye, an' I come to ax ye three times, an' the fright overtook me, an' I run home like a hare. I'm a dunce, Liza Jane an' there I am now."

Says he, givin' up for want of breath, "an' do what ye like with me."

But as Bab's Andy had gone on, Liza Jane's look was changin' an' changin' an, when he finished, her look was as mild an' gentle as a lamb's.

An' then she hung her head a wee bit, an' athrow her level best to blush, an' says she, "Oh, Andy, Andy! An' ye never preatend a word of this to me afore! An' I never suspected it! No, no, it's me is the dunce—it's me is the dunce, Andy!"

Poor Andy's heart, when he saw the change in her, came up again from the bottom of his boots, an' was thumpin' against the crown of his skull, wantin' room to rise. "An'," says he, "Liza Jane Bohunnan, then ye don't take it ill—me thinkin' of ye?"

"Andy McClarnin," says she, "ye know this is suddint—very suddint. An' myself is flustered, an'—an' nervous a bit, an'— But if ye insist on an answer on the spur of the moment," says she, "I don't believe I do take it ill, at all, at all."

"An' Liza Jane Bohunnan," says Andy, says he, gettin' the nerve as Liza Jane lost it, "Liza Jane Bohunnan," says he, "will ye consent from this time forr'd to wet yer wee grain of tay in my tay-pot?"

"Andy McClarnin," says she, "ye're a daicent, industrious boy, an' come of daicent, industrious people, an'—an' myself doesn't know but—maybe I could do worse."

The Over-Ambitious Girl

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

(Copyright, 1904, by Joseph B. Bowles.) Is there such a thing as useless knowledge, knowledge which is in itself rubbish, only fit to be stowed away in the lumber room of the mind?

I suppose teachers will take exception to the statement, but I am more and more inclined to think that a great deal that they laboriously teach, and schoolgirls laboriously learn, might as well be dropped wholly out of the curriculum. We are all aware that what remains to us a few years after we have finished our school education is, so far as facts are concerned, excessively small. What the schools have done, if they have wrought well, has been to give us mental facility and disciplined powers. The question is pertinent whether for girls they do this in the best way.

What ought you, a schoolgirl, to acquire in order to be prepared for your work in life?

It depends, of course, somewhat on your future. If you are to earn your bread by the toll of hands or brain, you must be taught application, concentration, perseverance and punctuality. Without these good working qualities, no girl will succeed in any trade, from dressmaking to novel-writing. Woman's great weakness lies in the direction of inattention, inconsequence and irresponsibility, and these defects hamper her in the world of business and fatally retard her progress.

The schools should cultivate in girls these forceful and indispensable qualities, as part of the equipment for fighting the world-battle. If arithmetic, algebra and geometry, or Latin and French, or physics and economics are best calculated to promote this sort of mental and moral growth, by all means let our young girls study them. But one young girl should not have to spend all her time and all her strength during the golden years of school and college work in mastering them all. For the practical purposes of life the schools attempt too much and crowd it into too short a time, in the education of girls.

Schoolgirls are naturally aspiring and ambitious. They respond swiftly to the spur of an enthusiastic teacher's desires. They are always ready to undertake anything that is suggested and to work until the point of exhaustion. I am not speaking of the idle or the inert or the apathetic type of girlhood, but of girlhood in the mass, when I assert that it does not hold back from the pace that kills.

Boys cannot easily be pressed beyond a certain mark. Girls see the mark and try to go beyond it. And in so doing they often accumulate a lot of useless and worthless knowledge which never does them or anyone else a particle of good, and which might better be left alone, especially as it gathers dust and rust in forgotten pigeon-holes.

If a girl is to spend her maturity as a home-maker, as a home daughter, or later as a wife, or a mother, she requires not so much an enormous amount of erudition as whatever tends to promote common sense, self-restraint and genuine kindness, and to eliminate egotism. Women at home must be altruistic. Then, too, a girl who would shine in the home and hold her own in society must have culture and charm. If the schools help to form her character on strong and simple lines and to give her courage as well as sweetness, they do more for her than if they enable her to pass puzzling examinations on multifarious difficult subjects.

Proper Style For Baby's Card

The Size of the Card Announcing Baby's Arrival and the Inscription Thereon.

For the announcement of his birth, the boy has cards about two and one-fourth inches in length by one and one-eighth inches in width. His full name is engraved directly in the center, either early English, plain English, or French script, being selected, in accordance with that used on the cards of the parents, with which it is inclosed.

Down in the left-hand corner is written out in full: Master William Thomas Carlyle, July the fifteenth.

Danger From His Own Bayonet

The report of disaffection in the Russian army is plausible and very ominous. In the last analysis the stability of the ruling dynasty depends upon the loyalty of the troops and there has been no display of leadership that could make one welcome armed revolution. In the very nature of the case things are uneasy in the army. The rank and file is recruited from the fields and city tenements—

Far be it from me to blame either girls or their preceptors for the great and foolish waste that is forever taking place in matters educational. Primarily parents are the people most in fault.

The other day an advertisement appeared in a widely read weekly periodical, which ran to the following effect. The words are not precisely quoted, but here is the gist of the advertiser's "Wanted:"

"To take entire charge of a little girl of ten, a young woman who is a college graduate. She must be fond of children, in robust health, and between the ages of 25 and 30. Must have had experience in similar positions and be able to furnish the highest references. She must be familiar with modern methods of teaching, and besides the usual branches, her work will include music, drawing and nature study."

The mother of the little maid of ten evidently expected that her child was to tackle music, drawing and nature study in addition to the "usual branches." These, at a rough guess, may have been history, geography, English grammar, spelling, reading, penmanship, and possibly French or German. I was surprised that so grasping a mother did not require the college graduate who should apply for the vacancy as her daughter's governess to be an accomplished cook and an adept in manual training, so that her child might receive initiation in these mysteries too.

The mother who advertised was laying out too wide a plan for her daughter, and was demanding an impossibility of some unfortunate young woman of 25. The average age of the college alumna is 22. To have gone over the work prescribed in an ordinary college course, likewise to have attained distinction enough in music and art to instruct in these exacting departments, and to have learned the alphabet of nature study would be feats of herculean achievement that would send a girl to a sanitarium or her grave. To look for robust health after all that effort would be absurd, and as for the experience in actual teaching, where would be the time for it? The advertisement is a straw that shows where the wind blows to.

Girls, what you need and must have, at any cost, is a good working knowledge of reading, writing and arithmetic; some love for and acquaintance with good literature, and this springs from good reading; the accuracy and clearness which come of writing a good hand, and the honesty which is the product of fair mindedness and well balanced arithmetic. Don't be persuaded to spend precious hours on studying sciences that do not allure you, and annexing to memory vocabularies which signify nothing to you. But for pity's sake learn to spell, learn to write a decent, straightforward letter, and learn to converse not only fluently, but correctly, in clear, well-chosen English.

Avoid useless learning. Life is too full to be handicapped by needless impedimenta. Time is too brief to be mortgaged to ambition. Health is too precious to be ruthlessly sacrificed.

One or two subjects thoroughly assimilated are worth far more to culture than a mere smattering of a dozen, and the effect of the first on character is much more enduring than of the second. I wish I could convince every schoolgirl that thoroughness in little is a higher virtue than diffuseness spread loosely over large things. Attempt less and gain more should be your rule.

One thousand nine hundred and six or the words, "At home on rainy days," may be used in the lower left-hand corner, and the date of birth left entirely out.

The latter is most used for baby girl's cards; it is not always permissible to have so definite a reminder of her birth-date, after years have passed.

These cards are attached by tiny ribbon bows at the top and center of the larger card, which should always be engraved with the names of both father and mother. The address is added, written out in full. For a boy pink ribbon and blue for the girl is chosen.
